Four police personnel injured in fresh Darjeeling violence in wake of four deaths in police firing

DARJEELING, JULY 9 (PTI): Violence returned to Darjeeling today on the 25th day of pro-Gorkhaland stir, with agitators setting aflame a police camp, injuring four police personnel and attacking a BDO office at Pokribong.

GJM supporters also took out a rally at Chowkbazar here with the bodies of Suraj Sundas and Sameer Subba who were allegedly killed in police firing.

The GNLFF also took out a procession at Sonada with the body of Tashi Bhutia, one of its party workers, who too was allegedly killed in police firing.

The protesters also attacked the Sonada police station and torched a part of it in what was the second such attack in two days.

The Sonada police station was attacked yesterday too by protesters.

A police booth was also set ablaze in Darjeeling by the protesters.

In the afternoon today a huge mob attacked a BDO office and a police camp at Pokribong and set it on fire as several police personnel were also beaten up.

Meanwhile, the all-party meeting of the hill parties, which was scheduled to take place on July 18, has been advanced to July 11.

The GJM has claimed that four persons were killed during police firing after clashes broke out between pro-Gorkhaland supporters and police in various parts of the hills yesterday.

The police, however, denied the reports of firing and said it did not fire a "single shot."

MS Rai, chairman of the Rai Development Board, resigned last night in protest against the alleged killings. The GJM also rejected Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee's offer of talks yesterday.

Rally for Gorkhaland reaches Delhi

NEW DELHI, JUL 9 (PTI): With a 110-metre long national flag, Gorkhaland supporters today marched in the national capital to reinforce their demand for a separate state and the immediate imposition of President's Rule in West Bengal.

Protestors belonging to the Gorkha Sanyukt Sangharsh Samiti (GSSS) here demanded the Centre's intervention in removing paramilitary forces with immediate effect.

"The West Bengal government is treating common people like terrorists and killing them. The central government should remove paramilitary forces and terminate the services of the Director General of Police," GSSS president Kiran B K told PTI.

The protesters marched from Rajghat to Jantar Mantar carrying the flag, depicting 110 years of their struggle for separate state.

The march culminated at Jantar Mantar where they joined their co-supporters who had been protesting for three weeks now.

"Just like Bengalis have their identity, we are fighting for ours. We are getting killed for seeking the rights we deserve. The Centre should look into the issue," said Stuti Thami of Darjeeling, adding that she was "ready to die" but not to stay under the West Bengal government.

Some of the placards that protesters carried criticised the BJP for its "attitude before and after the elections".

The Army was re-deployed yesterday after fresh violence erupted in the Darjeeling hills where Gorkhaland supporters torched a police outpost, the toy train railway station and clashed with the police at two places.

Expected confusion prevails over GST, but officials confident of its acceptance and benefits

ARPAN PRADHAN

GANGTOK, 09 JUL:

It's been seven days since the Goods and Services Tax (GST) was rolled out and there appears to still be some confusion prevailing among traders and store owners who are still sorting their goods into the GST slabs under which they now fall.

Consumers at several stores are being presented with bills claiming random GST rates, it is also being alleged. However, shopkeepers hope that the confusion will settle down soon. Sikkim was the tenth state in the country to pass the GST Bill in the State Assembly.

"It is new for everyone and people may face some problems initially in understanding GST, but from the point of view of implementing agencies, we can say that it has a long term benefits for all and is definitely going to have a good impact for all," said Commissioner cum Secretary, Commercial Taxes Division, Finance, Revenue & Expenditure, Government of Sikkim, Dipa Basnet.

Ms Basnet said that the central government has notified various rules and regulations and an MRP rule for the proper implementation of GST in the State, and that the department was working hard towards making people, both the customers and the business owners, aware of the GST.

"Sikkim being a consumer state, it is now more important for every individual to understand GST. Many people from Sikkim go outside the state to buy various things. GST will help the State get half of the taxes that are being paid by the customers who have bought something outside," she said.

She has appealed everyone to ask for proper bills with proper name, address and pin code mentioned in it.

Assistant Director and nodal officer for the GST roll-out, Bikas Diyali, adds that GST was a new platform for the State to fetch a new form of revenue which will ultimately help the state develop and grow.

"GST has a larger perspective and it is not possible to understand it in a short period of time. Like demonetization, people will eventually warm up to it," Joint Commissioner of the Commercial Taxes Division, Government of Sikkim, Manoj Rai said.

GST will bring in transparent and corruption-free tax administration, removing the current shortcomings of the supply chain owing to the multi-layered policies. GST is not only investor or business friendly but also consumer friendly, they stress.

GST is the need of the hour and any hindrance to its enactment is clearly unjustified and not in national interest. People argue about the feasibility of implementing GST. But one should always remember that there is no reform that is perfect. It is important that we start with the current bill and gradually improvise the same in due course, the officers underline.

chief minister, Sehore is a part of Vidisha Lok Sabha constituency being represented by senior BJP leader and External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj.

Shockingly, Barela has been using his daughters for ploughing for the last two years.

What After Cashing In?

There is still need for better fiscal management tips for rural Sikkim

It might actually be already too late to speak about the following concerns because too much has already been allowed to drain away. But then again, even if some sense is allowed to prevail despite the late waking up, it would be an effort well undertaken.

Sikkim has been blustering ahead on a fast clip of infrastructure and industrial construction ranging from wider roads to more roads to hydel projects to an airport to grand public facilities and industries. Projects invariably attract protests ranging from individual reservations to mass discomfort. Much, however, has been written about protests and responses, it is time now to deliberate on the post project-clearance scenario and the management practices that should be introduced. Land comes at a premium in a hill state like Sikkim and even though agricultural productivity is falling and cash crop/ horticulture options still in their infancy, land provides a sense of security to rural families. Most of the projects and investments require large transfers of land falling in the rural belt and this is where some initiatives, beyond the ones prescribed by laws and rules, need to be initiated. The required processes of public hearings, rate negotiations and enumeration of affected families are easy to deliver because these form part of the guidelines by which projects need to be undertaken and come in neatly listed out check-lists. Given the sheer number of projects on the anvil and the crores that will be handed over to private land holders across rural Sikkim to complete the acquisition process, it becomes necessary to ensure that the sudden liquidity in hands not used to manage finances does not drain away in momentary lapses of indulgence. One has to recognise the fact that Sikkim is not very organized when it comes to handling cash; there have been ample cases where even loans taken out for specific projects have been wasted on other non-productive pursuits and now one is looking at huge infusions of cash without any worries of repayment or interest servicing. A lot of these crores have already passed from the hands of project “developers” to affected land owners and then evaporated away leaving behind deep resentments. It is important that enough is done to generate genuine fiscal prudence among the affected families. Money covers for the property relinquished, but only wise investments can fill in for the security that land has traditionally provided.

This is where the State machinery needs to step up beyond the brief prescribed by Delhi, by staying with the people after the lands have been acquired, compensation handed over and projects completed. The State should have (and can still explore the possibility) put in place a system which empowers ‘compensated’ land owners with sound knowledge of investment options. The need for such an initiative is only amplified by the scams of private finance companies which did prolific business in rural Sikkim selling dubious schemes. Unless ‘informed’ otherwise, the suddenly cash-rich landowners will continue to become easy prey to the persuasive skills of such operators. And then there is always the possibility that the money will follow the personal loan inspired acquisition of luxuries wasted opportunities.

How can such a situation be averted? To begin with, the government can look into the possibility of the investors for whom land is being acquired also organise a series of workshops and sensitisation programmes on fiscal management for the affected people. Simultaneously, the real concept of rural banking should be aggressively promoted and a group of NGOs, selected after a thorough screening process, could be provided with specialised training on formulating rural investment options with which they could then approach the affected areas with. What the government could also incorporate is a special cell of handicapped officers to organise, monitor, improvise and advise such initiatives. It is the people's money at the end of the day and the government can do no more than inform them of possible options on what to do with their money, but should this information be intelligent and practical, it could turn around the rural economy and stand it more firmly on its feet. Like with all other initiatives witnessed in the State in the recent past, this too will have to be one that is directed right from the top and if pursued in the earnest, could trigger an economic revival that delivers not only economic security, but catalyses rural prosperity as well.

To fight radicalisation in Southeast Asia, empower the women

theconversation.com

Women have always been a quiet force to be reckoned with in uprisings worldwide. But, until recently, most studies focused on their roles as suicide bombers and combatants.

Terrorism research is now seeing a notable shift, with analysis examining the role women play as possible instigators of violence: mothers and mother-figures who are raising the next generation of soldiers.

WOMEN AS RADICALISERS

In Southeast Asia, for example, over the past year, there has been a rise in the number of stories of women involved in planning acts of terror and declaring support for extreme religious beliefs.

And ISIS is known to actively indoctrinate women in order to nurture young holy warriors.

Networks of women who pledge allegiance to the cause – whether ISIS’ or other extremist ideology – can exchange radical ideas among themselves and inculcate their children through a sustained domestic radicalisation strategy.

This suggests that terrorism prevention efforts should target not just extremist elements themselves, but also women, as possible vectors of radicalisation.

In Southeast Asia, home to 25% of the world’s Muslims, however, this proposition may sound particularly offensive. Here, women are often portrayed as symbols of virtue, selflessness and purity; entire sermons and treatises are dedicated to reverence for mothers.

A selection of hadiths, or Islamic teachings, about revering mothers are often cited as the reason for this inculcated respect, but even before the advent of Islam, Southeast Asian cultures treated mothers with great reverence.

Asian myths of various origins often feature a mother goddess who is deemed the personification of motherhood, fertility and creation.

Malay communities, for example, espouse a mother’s cherished status, and it is commonly believed that the pathway to heaven is in the footsteps of the mother. The notion that it might lead instead to extremist thought and violent action is a dramatic departure from traditional thinking.

Nonetheless, across Muslim Southeast Asia, there are clear indications of increasing religiosity, from the controversial election, in April, of a conservative Muslim as Jakarta’s governor to purported support and empathy for ISIS in Malaysia.

Could mothers, those glorified beings, be part of the problem? Given dramatic economic and cultural changes underway in the region, the notion is not unfounded.

FROM DISTRESS TO REPRIEVE

As many parts of rural and coastal Southeast Asia undergo rapid development and urbanisation, many communities are quickly losing the natural habitats upon which their traditional livelihoods, like fishing and farming, depended.

Some families have been forced to migrate or commute to urban areas to seek employment in manufacturing, but volatile economic conditions and increasing automation have cast doubt on the longevity of even these jobs.

As a result, societies in which men have typically been the main breadwinner are now leaning on women to put food on the table.

To do so, mothers often rely on informal women’s networks. These provide information on bargain shopping or bartering for food. They might also resort to income-generating activities that men disdain as too difficult (such as the sale of homemade products) or too demeaning (such as collecting snails and greens in the forests).

Even as women in Southeast Asia increasingly serve as the family backbone, they receive little recognition or support for this role. Mental health services and financial assistance for women under pressure, such as those provided in some rural parts of India, are rarely, if ever, available here.

On the contrary, research has shown that when men perceive that their public standing has been diminished by the inability to provide for the family, they may seek to exert more control in the personal sphere, translating into even more prohibitions on their wives and children.

Such economic and psychological burdens may leave poor, isolated women with religion as virtually their only reprieve.

WOMEN AS THE FAMILY’S BEACON OF RELIGION

A 2009 study of upper middle-class urban Malaysian women by Sylvia Frisk found that in spite of societal patriarchy, mothers and mother-figures are primarily responsible for disseminating and enforcing religious knowledge and rituals within their families.

And, in a decade of fieldwork in Malaysian coastal areas, we have seen that women who are most constrained by their husbands or families also most proactively take command of religious enforcement in their homes.

In other words, women who are under the most mental, physical or emotional pressures seem to find a sense of power that they are unable to exercise in other parts of their lives by compelling religious compliance in those closest to them.

Dictating religious practice becomes a way to exercise some form of control. The promise of a happier afterlife may also provide some sustenance.

The danger is that, unlike the upper middle-class women in Frisk’s study, poorer women have limited access to religious information. Their social circles are smaller, their movements more limited and they are less likely to read widely and critically question what they are taught.

If such women rely on a single source of Islamic learning, and that source is a radical one, they can be convincingly poisoned by extreme teachings. From here, it is not difficult to envision children being imbued with radical thought as well.

EMPOWER THE MOTHERS

Women enforcing religious thought is innocuous on its own. But it becomes a concern when considered alongside the rise in female engagement with Islamic extremism.

In the Middle East, the existence of radical Muslim women’s networks has been documented. In several high-profile cases, mothers have encouraged their sons to fight the “holy war”.

At times, mothers appear to have even celebrated their children’s deaths as martyrs.

This is now happening in Southeast Asia too. As the recent case of Malaysian women selling their property to be with their ISIS lovers shows, radicalisation among women is on the rise.

We also found that it is increasingly socially unacceptable to speak out against or disagree with a religious entity – a religious school or a faith leader, for example – in Malaysian society today, which allows venues for extremist education to flourish unchecked.

Among Malay Muslim, the fear that not abiding by anything taught by a religious teacher can lead to a loss of pahala, the reward of heaven, encourages compliance with religious instruction – no matter its source or content.

All of these factors combined create the perfect setting for women to disseminate radical Islamic beliefs, both intentionally and unintentionally. Their offspring may then fulfil their filial duty to obey.

To reduce the likelihood that radical thought will be spread in Southeast Asia, empower the mothers. Providing socioeconomic support where it is most needed – among women – is the best insurance against future terrorism, ensuring that mothers and families remain vectors for positive action and tolerant beliefs, not hotbeds of distress and discontent.

BOOK REVIEW: THE DEATH OF EXPERTISE

If it makes you uncomfortable, consider why

A new book expresses concern that the ‘average American’ has base knowledge so low that it is now plummeting to ‘aggressively wrong’

theconversation.com

I have to start this review with a confession: I wanted to like this book from the moment I read the title. And I did. Tom Nichols’ The Death of Expertise: The Campaign Against Established Knowledge and Why it Matters is a motivating – if at times slightly depressing – read.

In the author’s words, his goal is to examine: “... the relationship between experts and citizens in a democracy, why that relationship is collapsing, and what all of us, citizens and experts, might do about it.”

This resonates strongly with what I see playing out around the world almost every day – from the appalling state of energy politics in Australia, to the frankly bizarre condition of public debate on just about anything in the US and the UK.

Nichols’ focus is on the US, but the parallels with similar nations are myriad. He expresses a deep concern that “the average American” has base knowledge so low it has crashed through the floor of “uninformed”, passed “misinformed” on the way down, and is now plummeting to “aggressively wrong”. And this is playing out against a backdrop in which people don’t just believe “dumb things”, but actively resist any new information that might threaten these beliefs.

He doesn’t claim this situation is new, per se – just that it seems to be accelerating, and proliferating, at eye-watering speed.

Intimately entwined with this, Nichols mourns the decay of our ability to have constructive, positive public debate. He reminds us that we are increasingly in a world where disagreement is seen as a personal insult. A world where argument means conflict rather than debate, and ad hominem is the rule rather than the exception.

Again, this is not necessarily a new issue – but it is certainly a growing one.

The book covers a broad and interconnected range of topics related to its key subject matter. It considers the contrast between experts and citizens, and highlights how the antagonism between these roles has been both caused and exacerbated by the exhausting and often insult-laden nature of what passes for public conversations.

Nichols also reflects on changes in the mediating influence of journalism on the relationship between experts and “citizens”. He reminds us of the ubiquity of Google and its role in reinforcing the conflation of information, knowledge and experience.

His chapter on the contribution of higher education to the ailing relationship between experts and citizens particularly appeals to me as an academic. Two of his points here exemplify academia’s complicity in diminishing this relationship.

Nichols outlines his concern about the movement to treat students as clients, and the consequent over-reliance on the efficacy and relevance of student assessment of their professors. While not against “limited assessment”, he believes: “Evaluating teachers creates a habit of mind in which the layperson becomes accustomed to judging the expert, despite being in an obvious position of having inferior knowledge of the subject material.”

Nichols also asserts this student-as-customer approach to universities is accompanied by an implicit, and also explicit, nurturing of the idea that: “Emotion is an unassailable defence against expertise, a moat of anger and resentment in which reason and knowledge quickly drown. And when students learn that emotion trumps everything else, it is a lesson they will take with them for the rest of their lives.”

The pervasive attacks on experts as “elitists” in US public discourse receive little sympathy in this book (nor should these). Nichols sees these assaults as entrenched not so much in ignorance, more as being rooted in:

“...unfounded arrogance, the outrage of an increasingly narcissistic culture that cannot endure even the slightest hint of inequality of any kind.”

Linked to this, he sees a confusion in the minds of many between basic notions of democracy in general, and the relationship between expertise and democracy in particular.

Democracy is, Nichols reminds us, “a condition of political equality”: one person, one vote, all of us equal in the eyes of the law. But in the US at least, he feels people:

“... now think of democracy as a state of actual equality, in which every opinion is a good as any other on almost any subject under the sun. Feelings are more important than facts: if people think vaccines are harmful ... then it is “undemocratic” and “elitist” to contradict them.”

The danger, as he puts it, is that a temptation exists in democratic societies to become caught up in “resentful insistence on equality”, which can turn into “oppressive ignorance” if left unchecked. I find it hard to argue with him.

Nichols acknowledges that his arguments expose him to the very real danger of looking like yet another pontificating academic, bemoaning the dumbing down of society. It’s a practice common among many in academia, and one that is often code for our real complaint: that people won’t just respect our authority.

There are certainly places where a superficial reader would be tempted to accuse him of this. But to them I suggest taking more time to consider more closely the contexts in which he presents his arguments.

This book does not simply point the finger at “society” or “citizens”: there is plenty of critique of, and advice for, experts. Among many suggestions, Nichols offers four explicit recommendations.

The first is that experts should strive to be more humble.

Second, be ecumenical – and by this Nichols means experts should vary their information sources, especially where politics is concerned, and not fall into the same echo chamber that many others inhabit.

Three, be less cynical. Here he counsels against assuming people are intentionally lying, misleading or willfully trying to cause harm with assertions and claims that clearly go against solid evidence.

Finally, he cautions us all to be more discriminating – to check sources scrupulously for veracity and for political motivations.

In essence, this last point admonishes experts to mindfully counteract the potent lure of confirmation bias that plagues us all.

It would be very easy for critics to cherry-pick elements of this book and

SBI launches digital village in Nepal

KATHMANDU, JUL 9 (PTI): The State Bank of India has launched a digital village initiative in Nepal by installing a cash recycling centre.

The digital village initiative has been launched in Jarisingpouwa in Shankarapur Rural Municipality, 25 km east from Kathmandu. The centre was inaugurated jointly by Governor of Nepal Rasthra Bank Chiranjibi Nepal and Chairwoman of SBI Arundhati Bhattacharya yesterday.

The cash counter enables the villagers to deposit and withdraw money through the automatic machine. The bank has also distributed 430 debit cards to the people of the locality, which is considered remote area due to the hill side location though it is not very far from Kathmandu city. Solar street lights were also installed in the area. The SBI in Nepal also celebrated its 25 years of establishment on July 7.

Security beefed up in Tripura in view of IPFT blockade call

AGARTALA, JUL 9 (PTI): Security was beefed up in Tripura in view of the Indigenous People's Front of Tripura (IPFT) call for an indefinite blockade of the National Highway number eight from tomorrow, to demand for a separate state, police said today.

"Security was enhanced on the national highway and Tripura State Rifles (TSR) was engaged in patrolling to ensure peace and calm so that no untoward incident can take place during the proposed agitation," SP, Police Control, Dilip Roy told reporters. National Highway eight runs from Karimganj in Assam to Khayerpur in Tripura.

The IPFT has demanded that a separate state be carved out for the Tripura Tribal Areas Autonomous District Council (TTA-ADC) areas, which constitutes two third of the state territory and is the home to the tribals, who form one third of the population. The state government in a press statement had yesterday appealed to the IPFT to withdraw the agitation as the people would suffer due to the blockade on the National Highway.

The ruling CPI-M has opposed the blockade call and said the demand for separate state is "divisive and aimed at disrupting communal harmony and peace in the state". BJP Tripura unit president Biplab Deb told reporters that "The demand for separate state is improbable and it is not physically possible. The BJP opposes the demand".

India creates history, tops medal tally at Asian Athletics

PHILEM DIPAK SINGH BHUBANESHWAR, JUL 9 (PTI):

In a stunning show of dominance, India clinched five gold to top the medal tally for first time in the history of Asian Athletics Championships, pushing China to second spot, in their most successful campaign in the continental flagship event here on Sunday.

With Sunday's 5 gold, 1 silver and 3 bronze, India ended the four-day championships on top with their highest ever medal haul of 29 medals (12 gold, 5 silver and 12 bronze).

India's best came way back in the 1985 Jakarta edition where they had won 22 medals (10 gold, 5 silver, 7 bronze).

China ended this edition on second position with 8 gold, 7 silver and 5 bronze. They won 3 gold, 1 silver and 1 bronze on Sunday.

Japan topped the medal tally in the first five editions of the Asian championships from 1973 to 1981. China's domination began from 1983 at Kuwait City and continued till the previous edition at their home venue in Wuhan two years ago.

India snapped China's monopoly this time though their northern neighbours had fielded only a second string team here as their athletes are reserving their best for the upcoming World championships in London next month.

The host country, however, suffered a huge setback after 800m runner Archana Yadav was disqualified, after being initially declared as the gold medal winner, for pushing Sri Lankan rival Nimali Waliwarsha Konda from behind near the finishing line. The gold medal was then awarded to Konda and India thus lost a yellow metal in dramatic circumstances.

Despite this setback, the Sunday crowd at the Kalinga Stadium were on the edge of their seats as the Indians dished out a superb performance.

It was heptathlete Swapna Barman who gave India the first gold of the day (as Archana was qualified) as she collected a total of 5942 points from the seven events.

The 20-year-old from Bengal collapsed just after crossing the 800m race, the last of the seven events, and was taken for immediate medical attention.

Japan's Meg Hemphill was second with 5883 points while another Indian Purnima Hembram was third with 5798 points.

After that Lakhsmanan Govinda took the centrestage as he grabbed his second gold of the championship by winning the men's 10,000m event in 29 minute and 55.87 seconds. Another Indian Gopi Thonkanal was second in 29:58.89.

World junior record holder javelin thrower Neeraj Chopra struggled in his initial attempts but got his touch in time to clinch the gold with a final throw of 85.23m. Devinder Singh, who was embroiled in a marijuana positive test case, was third by clearing a distance of 83.29m.

India fittingly wrapped up the championships by winning gold in the men's and women's 4x400m relay races to send the packed crowd to wild celebrations, knowing fully well that it was a historic moment with the host country topping the medal tally for the first time.

The men's quartet of Kunhu Muhammad, Muhammad Anas, Rajiv Arokia and Amoj Jacob clocked 3 minute 2.92 seconds to win the race while the women's team of Nirmala Sheoran, M Povamma, Jisna Mathew and Debashree Mazumdar clocked 3:31.34 to ran away winners.

Jinson Johnson in men's 800m and Purnima Hembram in women's heptathlon won a bronze each.

Tailin Lyngdoh to depose before Meghalaya women panel

SHILLONG, JUL 9 (PTI): Tailin Lyngdoh, the Khasi governor's who was forced out of a posh Delhi club because of her traditional attire last month, will depose before Meghalaya State Women Commission tomorrow.

"We will depose before the State Women Commission at Shillong tomorrow," Tailin's employer Dr Nivedita Barthakur Sondhi told PTI.

She said the Commission sought their deposition as both Lyngdoh and Barthakur have lodged a complaint with it.

"I have met Meghalaya Chief Minister Mukul Sangma days after the incident and as per his advice we lodged a complaint with the state women commission," Barthakur said.

On June 25, staffers of posh Delhi Golf Club had asked Lyndoh, an invited guest, to leave a dining room because her traditional Khasi attire looked like a "maid's uniform".

Since then, Lyngdoh said, she had to deal with the post incident trauma and is not keeping well with her health too.

"The trauma of being ill treated. We (tribals) are not used to ill treat or look down upon people," Lyngdoh told PTI over phone.

Nagaland crisis: Zeliang stakes claim to form govt

KOIHMA, JUL 9 (PTI): Former Chief Minister T R Zeliang has staked claim to form the government in Nagaland asserting that he enjoyed the support of 41 of the 59 MLAs, after a majority of ruling NPF legislators rebelled against the incumbent Shurhozelie Liezietsu.

In a letter to Governor PB Acharya last evening, Zeliang claimed that at a meeting of the Legislature Party of the NPF on June 4, 34 party MLAs (including him) out of the total 47, supported him to be their leader and urged him to stake claim to form a new government.

The MLAs also urged Liezietsu, who was yet to become a member of the assembly, to resign and facilitate Zeliang becoming the new chief minister, the letter said.

Zeliang also claimed that seven Independents had also affirmed their support to him taking the tally to 41 out of 59 legislators.

Zeliang requested the governor to invite him to form a new Naga People's Front (NPF)-led DAN government in Nagaland at the earliest.

The 34 NPF legislators, who have extended their support to Zeliang, have been camping at a resort in Kaziranga in Assam where they held a meeting last evening, NPF sources said.

They told PTI last night that 33 MLAs were in Zeliang's camp, while 11 each were in the camps of Liezietsu and Lok Sabha MP and former chief minister Neiphiu Rio. The rest of the MLAs in the 60-member house are maintaining neutrality.

Liezietsu too in a statement had expressed pain at the "disturbing developments", which he said, was "affecting the normal functioning of the government".

The development comes at a time when Liezietsu, also the NPF president, is gearing up for the July 29 by-election from the Northern Angami-I assembly seat, vacated by his son.

Khriehu Liezietsu, son of the chief minister, had resigned on May 24 to enable his father to contest and be an elected member of the assembly to continue in office.

Liezietsu took over from Zeliang on February 22 this year following the state-wide protest against the holding of election to the urban local bodies with 33 per cent reservation for women.

This is the fourth time in the NPF-led DAN government when MLAs are working to oust the incumbent chief minister.

Since 2014 when Rio vacated the chief minister's chair to contest the Lok Sabha polls, the NPF government has faced such crisis twice in 2014 and 2015.

One more dies in Assam floods, toll mounts to 26

Guwahati, Jul 9 (PTI): The flood situation in Assam deteriorated today with one person losing his life, while nearly five lakh people are hit across 15 districts.

According to a report by the Assam State Disaster Management Authority (ASDMA), one person died in the swirling flood waters in Karimganj district.

With this, the total number of persons losing their lives in this year's flood-related cases has gone up to 26, including seven in Guwahati.

The ASDMA said more than 4.87 lakh people are currently suffering in Lakhimpur, Jorhat, Golaghat, Cachar, Dhemaaji, Biswanath, Karimganj, Sonitpur, Majuli, Barpeta, Nagaon, Nalbari, Sivasagar, Morigaon and Chirang districts.

Till yesterday, 3.83 lakh people were affected in the latest wave of flood across the state.

Around 1,096 villages are under water and nearly 41,200 hectares of crop area have been damaged, ASDMA said, adding, the worst affected is Lakhimpur, where over 1.21 lakh people have been affected by the deluge, followed by Karimganj with more than 1.19 lakh sufferers.

Authorities are running 181 relief camps and distribution centres in 10 districts, where 17,744 persons are currently taking shelter.

Across the state, 1,88,148 animals and poultry have been affected by the flood waters.

Due to the impact of flood waters, many roads, embankments and bridges have been damaged in several districts, including Majuli, Dhemaaji, Morigaon, Biswanath, Sivasagar, Golaghat, Jorhat, Karimganj, Sonitpur and Nagaon.

Currently, the Brahmaputra is flowing above danger mark at Nimatighat in Jorhat, Tezpur in Sonitpur, along with Dibrugarh, Goalpara and Dhubri towns.

Other rivers like Dikhow at Sivasagar town, Dhansiri at Numaligarh in Golaghat, Jia Bharali at NT Road Crossing in Sonitpur and Kushiara at Karimganj town in Karimganj are also flowing above danger mark.

Man held at Agartala airport with swiss knives in shoes

AGARTALA, JUL 9 (PTI): A Kolkata-bound passenger was apprehended at the airport here today for allegedly concealing two swiss knives in his shoes.

The incident was reported around 10:00 am when CISF officials detected some metal objects while frisking the passenger, identified as P Ghosh.

Ghosh was asked to remove his shoes which were placed on the X-ray screening system. It revealed that a knife was concealed in each shoe, officials said.

Ghosh and his three companions were handed over to police, they said.

The four hail from Tripura.

Police were trying to ascertain the motive of the passenger for carrying the knives, they said.

Cloth merchants on indefinite strike from tomorrow against GST

AHMEDABAD, JUL 9 (PTI): Textile traders in Ahmedabad will go on an indefinite strike from tomorrow to mount pressure on the government to roll back 5 per cent GST on cloth.

The decision was taken today during a meeting of traders associated with three major textile markets in the city, including Maskati Cloth Market Association, New Cloth Market and Panchkua Cloth Market, a release by these associations said.

present them out of context, to see Nichols as motivated by a desire to feather his own nest and reinforce his professional standing: in short, to accuse him of being an elitist. Sadly, this would be a prime example of exactly what he is decrying.

To these people, I say: read the whole book first. If it makes you uncomfortable, or even angry, consider why.

Have a conversation about it and formulate a coherent argument to refute the positions with which you disagree. Try to resist the urge to dismiss it out of hand or attack the author himself.

I fear, though, that as is common with a treatise like this, the people who might most benefit are the least likely to read it. And if they do, they will take umbrage at the minutiae, and then dismiss or attack it.

Unfortunately we haven't worked how to change that. But to those so inclined, reading this book should have you nodding along, comforted at least that you are not alone in your concern that the role of expertise is in peril.

Indian women’s hockey team hold South Africa 0-0

JOHANNESBURG, JUL 9 (PTI): Brilliant goalkeeping by Savita saw India hold hosts South Africa 0-0 in their first match of the Women’s Hockey World League Semi Final here.

India made a strong start with a structured game, a better ball possession in the first 15 minutes.

There were also some crucial circle penetrations made in the first quarter that fetched them a PC in the 12th minute of the match.

However, a fiercely struck flick by India’s dragflicker Gurjint Kaur was well-defended by South Africa’s first runner to deny India an early lead.

With the second quarter starting with the score reading 0-0, South Africa bounced back into the game with an improvised attack. They made two brilliant attempts on goal.

First it was Tarryn Glasby who beat Indian defenders in the circle to take a shot on goal, but an alert Savita was brilliant in her efforts to keep South Africa from scoring.

Sulette Damons’ shot on goal was perhaps the best chance South Africa had to score but her powerfully struck shot was slightly off the mark even as Savita made a diving effort to defend. Both teams went into halftime in a stalemate.

There was plenty of action in the third quarter with hosts

South Africa, backed by a roaring home crowd, and the support paid off when the home team scored through a field goal by Stephanie Baxter.

However, a clever call for video referral by India denied South Africa the goal as it came off the back of the stick.

India continued to keep the pressure on the hosts with a strong defence to keep them from making successful forays into the striking circle.

The final quarter witnessed both teams build up frantic pace, as both India and South Africa pushed for a goal. India won their second PC in the 47th minute but striker Rani’s attempt at scoring a PC was denied by South Africa s first runner who deflected the ball rather perfectly.

The following minutes saw South African forwards keep India’s Savita busy at the post as they made tactical variations to take shot on goal. But Savita was exceptional to deny them a goal.

South Africa made eight unsuccessful attempts on goal with 34 circle penetrations while India had 15 circle penetrations and three shots on goal. Though South Africa won their only PC of the game in the dying minutes, Tarryn Glasby was kept from converting the goal. India did well to hold hosts to a 0-0 draw and share the points.

India will take on USA on Monday.

Dutee in line for third medal

BHUBANESWAR, JUL 9 (PTI): Dutee Chand stayed on course for her third medal while Srabani Nanda eyed a second as Indian sprinters qualified for the final of the women’s 200m event on the final day of the Asian Athletics Championships here.

The two Odisha girls, who came together to win the bronze medal in the women’s 4x100m relay last night, made it through their respective semi-finals, with Srabani winning the first heat while Chand finishing second in the third heat.

Another Odisha sprinter, Amiya Kumar Mallick scraped through to the final of the men’s 200m race as the last fastest qualifier. Mallick had earlier been disqualified from the men’s 100m while he was part of the Indian sprint relay team that was also disqualified. Iran’s Hassan Taftian, who shocked favourite Femi Seun Ogunode in the men’s 100m final, failed to qualify in the 200m final.

The Indian men’s

4x400m relay team also qualified for the final by winning one of the two heats held in the morning session.

In the women’s heptathlon, Swapna Barman, with 5066 points, maintained her lead over the rest of the field by producing strong performances in the long jump and javelin throw.

Meg Hemphill of Japan (5005 points), however, leapfrogged Purnima Hembram (4922 points) into the second place with just one event to go -- the 800m race -- which will decide the medals in the evening session.

Sania advances in women, mixed events at Wimbledon

LONDON, JUL 9 (PTI): Capping off a great day for India, Sania Mirza advanced to the third round of both the women’s and mixed doubles events, while Rohan Bopanna and Purav Raja also won their respective mixed doubles matches at the Wimbledon here.

Mirza and Croatia’s Ivan Dodig, who are seeded fourth, needed an hour and 18 minutes to see off the Japanese duo of Yusuke Watanuki and Makoto Ninomiya 7-6 (5), 6-2 to enter the mixed doubles third round.

The Indo-Croatian duo finished its second round match with six aces and four double faults.

They next face the defending champions Henri Kontinen and Heather Watson for a spot in the quarterfinals.

In the women’s doubles event, Sania and her Belgian partner Kirsten Flipkens beat the British pair of Naomi Broady and Heather Watson in a hard-fought encounter to enter the third round.

Mirza and Flipkens scripted a 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 victory in one hour and 45 minutes.

The 13th seeded pair will next take on third seeds Martina Hingis of Switzerland and Yung-Jan Chan of Chinese Taipei for a place in the quarterfinals.

Partnering Japan’s Eri Hozumi, Raja carved out a win in his first round mixed doubles match over the American-Czech pair of James Cerretani and Renata Voracova 5-7, 6-4, 6-2.

They will next lock horns with 11th seeds Daniel Nestor and Andreja Klepac.

England, Mexico give thumbs up to facilities at Salt Lake

KOLKATA, JUL 9 (PTI): The coaches of England, Mexico and Chile were mighty impressed with the facilities at the Salt Lake Stadium, which is all set to host their Group F matches of the FIFA Under-17 World Cup.

Representatives of the Group F teams, including Iraq, on Sunday inspected the ground, hotel and training facilities, during their first visit to the city ahead of the October 6- 28 tournament.

Elated to get their matches in Kolkata, England head coach Steve Cooper said they are looking forward to check-in earlier than the FIFA schedule in October first week.

“First impression is very good. It’s fantastic, we are absolutely delighted to get our draw here in Kolkata. We have no complaints. There’s such a good enthusiasm for football here,” Cooper said.

“We have some provisional plans to come here a little bit earlier than the FIFA schedule. It’s a life experience as well -- to come to India and experience the culture, everything that comes along with it is a very important experience for the boys.”

Mexico interim coach Etchverria Perez Enrique termed the gigantic Salt-lake Stadium as “state-of-the-art”.

“We are really grateful for all the attention and reception in the city. We have seen the field and the stadium facilities. It’s state of the art work. The pitch is of first level. We are pleased to be here,” Enrique said.

Chilie coach Hernan Caputto also said he is happy to be here in Kolkata.

“I love Kolkata’s history. The people here are very nice with us. We hope to have some great matches here. The stadium looks beautiful and all new.”

The Saltlake Stadium will stage five group F matches beginning with Chile versus England at 5pm and Iraq versus Mexico at 8pm on October 8.

The stadium will host a group E fixture between England and New Caledonia, one pre-quarterfinal, the third place playoff and the summit clash on October 28.

Wi-Fi on planes: Are cybersecurity fears tough to tackle?

NEW DELHI, JUL 9 (PTI):

The fear of cyber attacks on planes is holding back the Indian government from allowing Wi-Fi on board aircraft, however, private players say the security framework sought by authorities is neither impossible nor unusual.

This explains why a top officer at the civil aviation ministry, which mooted the proposal, recently expressed his frustration over the delay by the home ministry in giving its nod and compared India with North Korea.

“India is perhaps the only country other than North Korea, which does not allow in-flight Wi-Fi services. Even international airlines flying over India have to switch off Wi-Fi when they travel over India...security agencies are still not convinced,” he said.

Before airlines in India can be permitted to provide Wi-Fi, the pre-requisite laid down by the government is for intercept capability to which Indian authorities have end-to-end audit and control.

“From our perspective this is not very different from what we see at many jurisdictions where cyber security or use of information technology for malicious purpose is an area of concern. The Indian government has demanded a framework at par with international standards. These are solutions that are neither unseen nor unimplemented,” CEO, SITA-ONAIR, David Lavorel.

In order to get a first hand experience of how Wi-Fi is enabled on a plane, PTI recently travelled on-board Honeywell’s Connected Aircraft, which was in New Delhi last week as part of its world tour.

Since May this year it has travelled to Dallas, Mexico City, Panama City, Toronto, New York, London and Paris.

For in-flight Wi-Fi, Honeywell’s satellite communications hardware is fitted on the aircraft so it can receive true broadband class connectivity via Inmarsat satellites, whose Global Xpress Service is powered by three Ka-band satellites and claim to provide four times the bandwidth available through Ku-band.

The hardware includes an antenna on an aircraft. Inside the aircraft there are three boxes, the size of a set-top-box, which include a KA-band frequency unit, KA-band aircraft network data unit and a modem manager.

“No one can hack into this network unless you are given access to this frequency. As far as the boxes are concerned no one can tap into them because there are security communication protocols. However, concerns emerge when you have access to Internet,” explains Inmarsat’s Director, Airline Market Development for India, Middle East and Africa, Rash Jhanjee.

Connectivity inside an aircraft can also be provided through air-to-ground communications network, which is more suitable for high-density domestic market. However, experts say India does not currently have such a facility.

“Air-to-ground and satellite connectivity for aircraft complement each other. In certain high density markets where there are single-aisle narrow body aircraft which fly on shorter routes, it makes more economic sense to deploy an air-to-ground network because these cost less and weigh less,” Jhanjee told PTI.

Britain's first pregnant man gives birth to girl!

LONDON, JUL 9 (PTT): A 21-year-old man has become the first in Britain to give birth after he put his sex transition on hold to get pregnant by a sperm donor. Hayden Cross, who made headlines around the world earlier this year when he announced he was pregnant by a sperm donor, has given birth to a girl.

Cross told The Sun that daughter Trinity-Leigh is his "angel". Cross gave birth by caesarean. The girl was born on June 16 at Gloucestershire Royal Hospital.

He had been living legally as a man for three years and was already part-way through hormone treatment to transform from a woman to a man. But the full transition was paused after the UK's state-funded National Health Service (NHS) refused to carry out a 4,000-pounds process to freeze his eggs -- which he hoped would enable him to have children in the future.

The former supermarket worker instead found a sperm donor via Facebook and became successfully pregnant. "She's perfect in every way...she is so good. I'm so lucky," Cross was quoted as saying.

Following the birth, Cross now plans to return to complete his gender realignment as soon as possible. The proud father was born a girl named Paige, 21 years ago.

Cross, from Gloucester, had said earlier, "I faced the prospect of not becoming the man I'm supposed to be, physically, or a dad. So I didn't feel like I had any choice but to have a baby now then get back to transitioning."

"In September I got pregnant by a sperm donation. I found the donor on the internet. I looked on Facebook for a group and found one -- it's been shut down now. I didn't have to pay," Cross had said.

Cross, who used to work for Asda and in a clothes shop, aims to find a job once the baby is aged one. Gender transition treatment costs the NHS on average 29,000 pounds per patient. Thomas Beatie became the first man to give birth in the US in 2008. Born a woman, he had a partial sex change but kept his womb and was able to conceive.

G20 vows to make cos, not only individuals, liable for graft

BARUN JHA

HAMBURG, JUL 9 (PTT):

Adopting a strong resolution to fight corruption, India and other G20 members have committed to make their public administrations more resilient against the menace, while ensuring that companies too are held liable in addition to individual perpetrators of this crime.

The declaration assumes significance as an OECD Anti-Bribery Convention, adopted nearly a decade ago, has been actively enforced so far only by a few countries and the prosecution rate is dismal even in the majority of the countries having ratified it.

In their joint declaration issued after the end of the two-day Summit on Saturday night, the G20 leaders said they remain committed to fighting corruption, including through practical international cooperation and technical assistance, and will continue to fully implement the G20 Anti-Corruption Action Plan 2017-18.

"We endorse four sets of High Level Principles aimed at fostering integrity in the public and private sector. By endorsing the High Level Principles on the Liability of Legal Persons, we commit to ensuring that not only individual perpetrators but also companies benefiting from corruption can be held liable," they said.

G20 countries have already committed themselves to a number of measures to strengthen transparency and integrity in the public sector, including requirements for the conduct of public officials.

In their 2017 declaration, the G20 members also made a strong commitment to make their respective public administrations more resilient against corruption. The leaders also said they will intensify their fight against illegal trade in wildlife and wildlife products.

"Wildlife trafficking is a threat to the planet's biodiversity, economic development, and, among others, health and security, and is facilitated by high levels of corruption, which the G20 cannot tolerate," the declaration said. The leaders also endorsed the High Level Principles on Countering Corruption in Customs and called for publishing a guide on requesting international cooperation in civil and administrative proceedings.

"We will continue our work to address integrity in sports and urge international sports organisations to intensify their fight against corruption by achieving the highest global integrity and anti-corruption standards.

"In this respect, we strive for a common understanding regarding corruption risks in bids to host major sport events.

"We are also committed to fighting corruption in contracts, including in the natural resources sector. We call for ratification and implementation by all G20 members of the UN Convention against Corruption and for a strong involvement in its review process," it added.

The Principles document adopted by the G20 leaders noted that corruption hampers the efficient and effective operation of government, its fairness and impartiality of decision-making and the delivery of government services.

"A public administration, resilient against corruption, underpinned by a culture of integrity, accountability and transparency not only fosters citizens trust but can also affect the attractiveness of a country as a business location," it added.

Incidentally, India figures among the countries where corruption has been a major political issue and the Modi government has been maintaining it will leave no stone unturned in its fight against graft and black money. For many years, G20 has been listing corruption as one of the biggest impediments to global economic growth and its sustainable development agenda.

Ahead of the G20 Summit, some rights groups had called for reaching wider consensus among leaders of the top economies for implementing laws akin to the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of the US. While the G20 has been stressing on greater efforts for tackling this menace for more than six years now, the OECD Anti-Bribery Convention (OECD Convention) has been actively enforced so far only by four countries. The OECD Anti-Bribery Convention, adopted in 1997, requires each signatory country to make foreign bribery a crime for which individuals and enterprises are responsible. The Convention is a key instrument for curbing the export of corruption globally because the 41 signatory countries are responsible for approximately two-thirds of world exports and almost 90 per cent of total foreign direct investment outflows.

As per OECD, nearly two decades after the OECD Convention on Combating Foreign Bribery entered into force, there are still 20 countries with "little or no enforcement and nine countries with only limited enforcement".

About half of the Convention countries have failed to prosecute any foreign bribery case since they joined the Convention. There are a few improvements, but the performance of the majority of the 41 countries that agreed to combat foreign bribery in international business transactions is far from satisfactory. Only four countries improved since last year - Greece, Netherlands, Norway and South Korea, while Argentina was the one country that regressed, the OECD said.

Islamic State militants have pledged to "fight to the death" in the Old City of Mosul in Iraq. The fighters are making their last stand in the district of Maydan on the banks of the River Tigris, where Islamic State's Amaq news agency said there had been "fierce fighting". Iraqi commanders have said their forces are "tens of metres" away from defeating IS there. A US general told the AFP news agency that the Iraqi military was close to announcing a final victory. "An announcement is imminent," Brigadier General Robert Sofge said. "I don't want to speculate if it's today or tomorrow but I think it's going to be very soon." Amaq said that IS militants were "holding onto their fortified positions". "The fighters of Islamic State are collectively pledging (to fight to the) death in Maydan," it said.

N Korea warns of nuclear 'tipping point' over US bomber drill

Seoul, Jul 9 (AFP):

North Korea today lashed out at a live-fire drill the US and South Korea staged in a show of force against Pyongyang, accusing Washington of pushing the peninsula to the "tipping point" of nuclear war.

The allies held the rare live-fire drill as tensions grew over the peninsula following the North's first intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) test held last week. The test sparked global alarm as it suggested North Korea now possessed an ICBM capable of reaching Alaska, a major milestone for the reclusive, nuclear-armed state.

Yesterday's drill, designed to "sternly respond" to potential missile launches by the North, saw two US bombers destroy "enemy" missile batteries and South Korean jets mount precision strikes against underground command posts. The North's state-run Rodong newspaper accused Washington and Seoul of ratcheting up tensions with the drill, in an editorial titled "Don't play with fire on a powder keg."

"The US, with its dangerous military provocation, is pushing the risk of a nuclear war on the peninsula to a tipping point," it said, describing the peninsula as the "world's biggest tinderbox."

During yesterday's drill, long-range B-1B Lancer bombers reportedly flew close to the heavily-fortified border between two Koreas and dropped 2,000-pound (900 kilogram) bombs.

Pyeongyang described the joint drill as a "dangerous military gambit of warmongers who are trying to ignite the fuse of a nuclear war on the peninsula."

"A small misjudgment or error can immediately lead to the beginning of a nuclear war, which will inevitably lead to another world war," it said.

Tension has been high as the US administration under President Donald Trump and the North's regime under leader Kim Jong-Un have exchanged hostile rhetoric for months. Tension further escalated after Tuesday's ICBM test, US and South Korean troops fired ballistic missiles simulating an attack on the North's leadership "as a strong message of warning," the South's military said at the time. The US Missile Defense Agency said Friday it would soon test an anti-ballistic missile system in Alaska.

SELENA GOMEZ AND DEMI LOVATO EACH REVEAL RELEASE DATE OF THEIR NEW SINGLES

Disney Showdown Maybe?

Selena Gomez and her cast-mate from the 2012 film Gucci Mane are set to collaborate on a new track called "Fetish," the singer teased Friday (July 7) on Twitter.

Gomez shared what looks like the single's album art -- a vintage-looking image of the 24-year-old carrying grocery bags next to a broken-down car -- along with a release date of July 13. The Revival pop star also revealed a trio of cryptic images tied to the forthcoming song on Instagram. It's not the first time Gomez has teased the project. We first got a hint at "Fetish" through a short clip debuted at the end of Gomez's recent music video for the Talking Heads-sampling hit "Bad Liar."

Meanwhile, Lovato teased a new track

NEWMUSICALERT!

called "Sorry Not Sorry" with a delightful gif that starts off with her all smiles before she closes her car window with a cheeky wink to reveal the song's title. Oh, and its release date is July 11. Clearly, Lovato's saucy new track is a message to the haters: There will be no apologies. Knowing that, some couldn't help but notice that Lovato's teaser has an interesting Selena Gomez connection.

Given that the status of the two former Disney stars' friendship is still hard to define, some wondered if the fact the two teased new tracks on the same day wasn't exactly a coincidence. Certainly, the title of Lovato's new single adds some fuel to that fire.

BOXOFFICEREPORT

'SPIDER-MAN: HOMECOMING' SNARES $1.36 MILLION INDIA OPENING

Spiderman: Homecoming took first place in India on its opening day with a 6.5 crore ($1 million) opening on Friday. When added to its 2.25 crore ($0.36 million) in Thursday preview grosses, the action comedy led all pictures at the country's theaters, beating out locally-made drama Mom by a wide margin.

The new Tom Holland-Robert Downey Jr. starrer's 6.5 crore total on Friday is just a shade less than the 6.64 crore Spider-Man 3 earned on its first Friday ten years ago. The latter film, the last of the Tobey Maguire pictures in the franchise, remains the highest-grossing Spider-Man film to date in India's box office history.

If Homecoming's attendance holds up on Saturday and Sunday it should approach Spider-Man 3's 19.41 crore ($3 million) debut, which it earned over the May 4-6, 2007 weekend frame. The prior film earned a total of $16.4 million during the length of its run, the 7th highest total ever for a Hollywood movie in India. Close behind at 9th and 10th are The Amazing Spider-Man (2012) with $14.5 million, and The Amazing Spider-Man 2 (2014) with $13.6 million, respectively.

Spider-Man 3 re-sets the franchise with the youngest actor to play the role so far. At just 19, the British actor Tom Holland brings a more naive energy to the role than Maguire or Andrew Garfield did in their turns as the masked web-slinger. Robert Downey Jr., playing his Tony Stark/Iron Man persona in the film, serves as a mentor to the budding young superhero while also rooting the picture firmly in the Marvel Cinematic Universe.

The new suspense thriller Mom marks the legendary Sridevi's return to Bollywood in the film's title role. Directed by Ravi Udyawar and produced by Sridevi's husband Boney Kapoor, the well-reviewed film also stars renowned actors Nawazuddin Siddiqui and Akshaye Khanna in pivotal roles. It took in 3.1 crore rupees ($480,000) in receipts on its opening day, Friday.

ED SHEERAN ADMITS HE GOT 'SHUT DOWN' FOR AIMING FOR ADELE'S LEVEL OF SUCCESS

Ed Sheeran sets high goals for himself. In early 2017, he declared friendly competition with Adele, "the only person I need to sell more records than."

"I'm not in competition [creatively] because we all sit in our own lanes," the singer told GQ, "but once the creative product is out there is a race to the finish line."

In a new interview, set to air this weekend, Megyn Kelly asked about Sheeran's ambition to sell more than 20 million albums and top Adele's record. "I feel like me saying this, a lot of people were like, 'That's such an arrogant thing to say,'" Sheeran says in a clip from their chat. "I think you need to choose someone that's at the top of their game. Like, I probably won't sell 20 million records. And I probably won't ever be as big as Adele. But if you don't aim for the top of the mountain, how are you ever gonna get halfway?"

"The problem is, my point never comes across with that. That quote is now just 'I want to be bigger than Adele,'" Sheeran explains.

"The word Adele is just something that no one should f--- with, basically," he admits. "If you put that in any sentence, prepare to be shut down."

ARIES: Have you recently lost some faith in the future, Aries? Isn't it time to do something about it, especially where your personal life is concerned? You could find the answers to these questions if you'd take a second look at the quality of your close relationships. Who knows? Love might give you back your enthusiasm for life.

TAURUS: If you have a tendency to do a little too much dreaming, reality could catch up with you now. The time has come to react immediately, Taurus. Certain financial or professional goals may see some delays. You need to figure out how to get things going again in a more concrete and secure direction. Don't let anything get past you today.

GEMINI: Everyone has impulsively bought something without really thinking about it first. As far as you're concerned, Gemini, it happens a little more often than it should. Have you looked at your closet full of the clothes you never wear? Why do you keep them? Is it reassuring? Don't get caught up in fashion crazes. Try to be more careful with your money.

CANCER: You're in tune with the atmosphere around you today because of your tolerance, humanity, and the respect you have for everyone, no matter what their position in society or intellectual capacity. Generosity is coming alive inside you, Cancer. The one thing you want to do is understand the people close to you. Support them and show them that they can count on you.

LEO: If you tend to be a little anxious about solitude, Leo, it doesn't necessarily mean you're dependent on the people close to you. That isn't the only contradictory thing about your behavior. You tend to want to bring people together while keeping your distance. From now on, you should try to be a little clearer in your relationships.

VIRGO: Sometimes it's hard for you to believe something unless you see it firsthand, Virgo. However, the period you're in now may be pushing you to try and understand some of the mysteries on faith. Though you probably aren't one to do this very often, you may be feeling some kind of mystical impulse that makes you think about the nature of your beliefs.

LIBRA: Love is in the air, Libra! You may encounter some wonderfully passionate situations today. You're ready to live these marvelously rich and emotional experiences to the fullest. Put your doubts and insecurities away for the time being. Lose yourself in pleasure and the unknown. Have a great time!

SCORPIO: Today's powerful astral phenomena will encourage you to develop your skill as a visionary, Scorpio, no matter what you do with your day. You're one of those rare people who can sense before anyone else the changes that will happen in the world. Let these feelings encourage you. Use them to believe in tomorrow.

SAGITTARIUS: It's time to get down to work, Sagittarius. At the moment, you can't depend solely on your natural creativity, spontaneity, imagination, and originality to get by. You need to demonstrate a certain amount of pragmatism and self-discipline to reach your goals. This will certainly seem more difficult than it really is. It's time to have faith in attributes other than your intuition.

CAPRICORN: What do you want? It isn't always easy to live with others, Capricorn. You may ask too much of the people close to you and not be able to stand it when they don't live up to your high expectations. Your idealism makes it hard for you to compromise. This attitude can cause conflict and make you hard to live with. Change it.

AQUARIUS: It's possible you took a chance on someone who has disappointed you, Aquarius.

You were especially tolerant and patient, but now it's time to finally settle things and put your cards on the table. Don't be afraid to do what you have to do in order to protect yourself and the people you love.

PISCES: Have been letting yourself go lately, Pisces? Now it's time to take better care of your body. This new initiative will make you feel happier and more ready to tackle life again. You may hesitate over whether or not you should try some of the alternative medicines that you hear about. This is only a small dilemma. Be glad you've finally decided to live a healthier lifestyle.
