Social conflict can't end unless forces fanning it cease to exist: Tushar Gandhi

ALIGARH (UP), Oct 30 (PTI): Noted author and great-grandson of Mahatma Gandhi, Tushar Gandhi Tuesday said the social conflict cannot end unless the forces having vested interest in creating it cease to exist.

There can be no peace in the world as long as the military-armament industry continues to call the shots in global affairs, he said, adding this industry would collapse if there is peace in the world.

Gandhi made the remarks while delivering his keynote address at a seminar on Gandhian Perspective on Alternative Dispute Resolution at the Aligarh Muslim University here.

It is the downtrodden, common people of the world who pay the price for the greed of power-brokers and the manufacturers of armaments, he said.

Referring to the internal peace in the country, Gandhi said, "There are forces at work which thrive by creating internal conflicts in the country and as long as there are political forces which gain mileage out of conflicts, the country can never be at peace."

He said India will truly become a nation when all these conflicts between different sections of the society are resolved and the people work together for a common cause.

Touching upon the ongoing conflict at the Sabarimala Temple in Kerala, Gandhi said it was not the real 'bhakts' (devotees) of the Sabarimala deity who are at the forefront of this imbroglio.

It is being fuelled by those who seek political mileage out of this conflict, he said.

Calling upon the younger generation of the country to take up the challenge of resolving the internal conflicts presently plaguing the Indian society, Gandhi said it is for the youths to realise the importance of destroying the "seeds of conflict and hate".

Do not burn incense stick, avoid outdoor activity: Govt agency issues advisory to Delhiites

NEW DELHI, Oct 30 (PTI):

If you light an incense stick as part of your puja rituals, stop right now. As Delhi's air quality turned 'severe' on Tuesday, this directive was part of an advisory by a government agency which also warned people against any outdoor activity.

In the advisory, the Centre-run System of Air Quality Forecasting And Research (SAFAR) asked Delhiites not to rely on dust masks for protection as city's air quality turned 'severe' Tuesday for the first time this season.

The overall Air Quality Index (AQI) at 3 pm was 401, falling in the 'severe' category, the highest this season, Central Pollution Control Board officials said.

SAFAR recorded the AQI at 410.

An AQI between 0 and 50 is considered 'good', 51 and 100 'satisfactory', 101 and 200 'moderate', 201 and 300 'poor', 301 and 400 'very poor', and 401 and 500 'severe'.

The agency has advised Delhiites to avoid all outdoor activities and give a miss to walk Tuesday.

"If the room has windows, close them, if the air conditioner provides a fresh air intake option then choose it, avoid burning anything such as wood, candle or even an incense," it said.

The advisory also recommended frequent wet mopping and using masks known as N-95 or P-100 respirators only for outdoor activities.

"Do not rely on dust masks for protection," the advisory added.

Eighteen areas in Delhi recorded 'severe' air quality with the highest AQI at 4 PM recorded at Anand Vihar at 467, according to a data by the CPCB.

Faridabad, Ghaziabad,

Gurgaon and Noida recorded 'severe' air pollution, crossing the AQI of 400. Greater Noida's air is also on the brink of turning severe, the data said.

SAFAR has attributed the spike to "heavy stubble burning in the last 24 hours and calm winds".

About 28 per cent of pollution by PM2.5 (presence of particles in the air with a diameter of less than 2.5 micrometers) on Tuesday was caused due to regional factors like stubble burning, SAFAR officials said.

The Indian Institute of Tropical Meteorology (IITM) also spotted a large number of biomass fire spots through satellite imageries in neighbouring states of Delhi.

A SAFAR official said pollution is likely to increase faster now with lead pollutant as PM10 because of new development as shown by SAFAR-model.

EMRS is a central scheme of model residential schools for tribals (Scheduled Tribes) across the country which was launched in 2000.

Tribal Affairs Minister Oram, who was in the steel city to participate in the two-day national-level EMRS music competition organized by the East Singhbhum district administration at Tata Auditorium here, said the purpose was to bridge the competence gap between the tribal youths and others in all fields including higher studies and competitive examinations.

Addressing the gathering as chief guest on the occasion, Oram said currently there are 182 Eklavya schools operating in the country and the government has plans to start 700 more by 2022.

The schools would be opened in blocks where tribal population was over 20,000, he said adding that 80 per cent of blocks in Jharkhand would come under the scheme.

Lauding the performance of EMRS, the minister said the students were doing well and secured first and second ranks so far as Union Public Service Commission or State Public Service Commissions competitive examination were concerned.

The students are, however, lagging behind in confidence in the competitive exams, he said.

"We have to inculcate confidence among them that they are the national achievers in any field whether it was sports or education and can improve their performances," he said.

Oram said the government has provided pilot training to tribal youths under the scheme and have been coaching them for professional competitions.

Appreciating the Jharkhand government's efforts in organising the inaugural edition of the national level EMRS music competition successfully, the minister assured that the event will be organized every year.

Traffic Jammed in Gangtok

It will get worse because nothing is being done

Commuting in Gangtok is comfortable only during holidays or on a Saturday immediately after a break like the one we recently enjoyed with Dasain and will get to enjoy again after Tihaar. This is so because it is only during these extended holidays that traffic flows on Gangtok roads instead of snarling. But even this reprieve is getting rare because tourist vehicles are now in close competition with the office and school jumble on the roads. The tedium of driving into Gangtok from Ranipool has become the new normal and will only get worse. And it will be getting worse not just because more people will own more vehicles or because more tourists will get attracted to Gangtok, but more so because nothing appears to be in the works by way of even planning, leave aside implementation, to improve the situation.

Suffice to say that traffic is a problem in Gangtok. The jams are becoming longer and denser and parking has emerged as a challenge for which no one has presented a practical solution. There is, after all, only so much road available to accommodate the march of vehicles which show no signs of tapering off. What also continues to hamstring Gangtok when it comes to managing its traffic is the fact that most of the solutions that consultants could offer – like wider roads or bypasses or flyovers – are not possible here. The capital will have to work with the roads it already has, at least along stretches where most of the congestion takes place. There is no scope for widening or creating alternate routes. That said, there are still some options it could explore even when it comes to road usage and also some experiments it could try out.

Let us start with the situation shared at the start of this piece. The worst congestion on Gangtok roads is in the block from around 10 a.m. till around noon, the morning office rush hour. Many commuters will disagree and insist that jams are a permanent feature through the day nowadays. Let us presume for now that it is worst during office hour rush. The jams standstill again once offices give over later in the afternoon. For anyone who sees traffic as a problem, this should then be the first situation to be addressed.

One way to reduce the number of vehicles on the roads at this time would be to increase and incentivize the use of office car pools. This option is already being used to some extent in government offices. However, not all government servants travel in their own vehicles or car-pools, and many use share cabs. Further, car-pooling serves only government servants, but government offices also attract lay people coming there, and they too mostly use share taxis. What could ease congestion would be the introduction of a good public transport shuttle during the peak rush hours. Before anyone points to the city runners as a public transport service already deployed, let's accept that these are too few and too erratic in timing to be taken seriously as a solution at present. Traffic flows can be eased, and so congestion removed, with better information. Better information among commuters about how frequently buses will be available. Ply enough of them on the roads during rush hours, and inform the people about the frequency, and most would prefer buses to clambering for share-taxis at the designated stops.

Of course, since office hours trigger the biggest jams, the policy makers could also consider staggering the office hours so that the rush of office-goers is also spread out instead of being bunched together. But then again, for this solution to bear any results, the work culture will have to be much more consistent than the present trend of casual timings. But if this were to work, then the arrival of lay people to offices could also be spread out by appointing timings, say to two hours after offices open, for people to meet offices.

What the planners need to also ponder on is to make the link roads, like the one flowing through Arithang to the bypass or from ICAR to 5th Mile or the Paljor Stadium Road shooting down to bypass, more motorable and convenient for people to consider bypassing the gridlocked zones unless they have to necessarily suffer through them. At present, the alternates are not even close to being convenient diversions and anyone who has to reach anywhere Gangtok is forced to drive through the entire length of it. It goes without saying that if the driving surface was improved on the many feeder roads, more people would consider using them even if they were longer than that NH10 route. For instance, too many people who have the option of using the bypass don't do so because of its terrible condition. Also, since tourists cannot be kept away from Gangtok, at least the government offices need be clustered around the main town.

Of course, there are more options that could be considered, and definitely many more, much better solutions that can be attempted, but let's take these as a starting point for more ideas to be voiced to do a better job of managing Gangtok traffic.

People often believe that terrorism is the weapon of the weak.

In other words, terrorism is practiced by marginalized groups that cannot influence government's policies through legitimate means. However, developments on the violent far right since the victory of Donald Trump, I'd argue, present a different reality.

The attack at Pittsburgh's Tree of Life Synagogue, as well as the sending of pipe bombs to critics of the current administration are just the latest examples of the consistent increase in the violence on the margins of the political camp currently controlling all branches of government. Because these acts were perpetrated by individuals with clear political agendas, I'd call them terrorism. While neither of these men were part of a named terrorist organization, and the synagogue shooting is being investigated as a hate crime, I'd argue that they are part of a virtual community that supported their political worldview.

The nonprofit Anti-Defamation League found that anti-Semitic incidents in the U.S. rose by 57 percent in 2017, the largest single year increase since it started recording such statistics. My own data set documents all far-right violent incidents since 1970 – not just anti-Semitic ones – and was first published in 2012. It reveals that in 2017 the United States experienced a 70 percent increase in violent attacks perpetrated in the name of far-right ideology.

Could a victory at the ballot box actually facilitate violence? Examples from other countries indicate that this may not be such a rare phenomenon. The two most brutal terrorist groups which emerged from the settlers' movement in Israel – the Jewish Underground in the early 1980s and the Bat-Ayin Group in the early 2000s, operated in times when right-wing governing coalitions dominated the Israeli political system. Both groups were engaged in a campaign of violence against Palestinian civilians in the West Bank in order to undermine any policies designed to promote conciliation between the two sides.

Similarly, the electoral successes of European far-right parties in recent years, especially in local elections, were followed by increasing activity of related violent far-right groups and movements. The success of the AfD in Germany since 2016 was followed by acts of violence which were not seen in Germany since the times of the Nazi Party, such as the two days of violence against Jews and immigrants at the town of Chemnitz.

How can these trends can be explained? A research project which I'm currently conducting with two of my Ph.D. students at the University of Massachusetts Lowell tests three possible explanations.

TOLERANT AUTHORITIES

Potential perpetrators of violence may assume that the new political regime that they perceive to be supportive of their views will be more tolerant of politically motivated violence or illegal acts. These expectations are not without some basis.

Research I published in 2012 in the journal Security Studies showed that Israeli governments tended to use milder counterterrorism measures when they responded to the violence from groups that were ideologically close to them.

Similarly, studies focusing on the rise of left- and right-wing terrorism in Italy, and white supremacy groups in the American South, further confirmed that political officials are more reluctant to operate against groups which are located on their side of the political spectrum.

In the context of the U.S., individuals and groups that adhere to far-right ideology may interpret signals from government official as acceptance of their actions – or, at least, a sign that they can expect more lenient treatment from law enforcement. The Trump administration's decision to focus its counterterrorism efforts on Islamic terrorism, and defund programs focusing on domestic radicalization may be one such signal. Another example is Trump's reluctance to single out and criticize far-right groups and activities. His attitude was manifested after white supremacists marched in Charlottesville with Confederate battle flags, anti-Semitic placards and torches – activities Trump seemed loath to condemn. Lastly, conspiracy theories presented by some far-right pundits about the left's involvement in the recent sending of pipe bombs, and the president's decision to put the word “bomb” in quotation marks when addressing such incidents in his Twitter account may be read as tacit defense of such acts.

EMPOWERMENT

Another possibility we are testing is that perpetrators of violence feel empowered by Trump's electoral victory in 2016. They feel his winning the election means their actions and ideology are gaining growing public legitimacy. In other words, they feel a sense of duty to continue to be engaged in political participation to ensure the implementation of their political ideology, as well as to attain a more visible position within the political arena.

Relative ‘disappointment’

A third explanation is based on political scientist Ted Gurr's classical theory of relative deprivation. Gurr's theory is that political violence often results from a gap between constituencies' expectations and the actual goods provided by the government.

The reasoning here would go that the election of Trump led to high expectations in the American far right that the federal government would adopt at least some of their militant views and policy ideas. If, in the eyes of far-right activists, these expectations were not met, some of them may express their frustration via violent activities.

The difficulties of the current administration in implementing some of its immigration policies, as well as some willingness to compromise on the issue of gun legislation, may have frustrated activists who may feel the need to express their concerns via violent or illegal acts. For example, the Pittsburgh shooter felt Trump was a globalist not a nationalist, and influenced by his Jewish family and close associates.

COUNTERING THE VIOLENCE

While our study is still ongoing, some initial findings can provide insights about the applicability of the above mentioned explanations.

The fact that the rise in the level of violence occurred immediately after the 2016 elections, and the relative success of the administration in delivering on many of its election promises – the travel ban, electing two justices to the Supreme Court – indicate that empowerment rather than a sense of deprivation may be responsible for the rise in the level of violence. The fact that the violence hasn't increased since its peak in 2017 also suggests that the root causes of the violence are related more to the election results than subsequent policy developments. Moreover, the administration's reluctance to delegitimize violent manifestations further enhance this sense of empowerment.

It is important to note that historical dynamics also support these insights. A study I published in 2012 shows that anti-abortion violence actually tends to increase following pro-life decisions of the Supreme Court. For example, between 1989 and 1992, a series of pro-life Supreme Court decisions upholding increased state supervision of abortion procedures empowered pro-life activists. Anti-abortion violence increased.

Coming back to today, the growing polarization of the American political system and the tendency to see elections as a zero sum game encourages each of the political parties to maximize the benefits of electoral victory. That, in turn, involves disregarding norms of cooperation and consensus building. What I would argue is that this need to exploit the fruits of victory may also encourage a few supporters of the winning political camp to use violence.

Bolsonaro wins Brazil election, promises to purge leftists from country

After the most polarized and divisive campaign in its modern history, Brazil has elected as its next president a right-wing politician who openly disdains human rights and admires military dictators.

Jair Bolsonaro, a 63-year-old congressman who had strong evangelical backing for his law-and-order stance on policing, support for gun rights and opposition to abortion, won 55 percent of votes. Bolsonaro's leftist competitor, Fernando Haddad, a former education minister and ex-mayor of São Paulo, received 45 percent of the roughly 100 million ballots cast.

Bolsonaro's angry, populist campaign rhetoric led many newspapers and public figures worldwide to declare his candidacy a threat to democracy. But 57.8 million Brazilians on Sunday showed less concern about Bolsonaro's message.

Haddad, his opponent, joined Brazil's presidential race less than a month before the first round of voting. The Workers Party, which has run Brazil since 2002, tapped Haddad to replace front-runner Inacio Lula de Silva, a wildly popular former president jailed on corruption charges in July. Haddad was unable to retain Lula's lead.

BRAZIL'S POLITICS OF DISILLUSIONMENT

Bolsonaro's victory will likely worsen an already acute crisis in Brazil, the second-most populous nation in the Western Hemisphere.

Once a rising star in the developing world, Brazil has been mired in severe recession and political turmoil since 2015. Hundreds of politicians, including former President Lula, have been arrested and jailed in a judicial investigation that has exposed corruption at the highest levels of government.

That corruption has consequences: A survey conducted in August by the Brazilian Institute of Public Opinion and Statistics showed that only 25 percent of citizens trusted their federal government and 18 percent trusted Congress.

In such circumstances, Bolsona-ro's win as an anti-establishment candidate was predictable – and not just because Bolsonaro had maintained a clear lead in the polls ever since Lula withdrew in September.

When voters don't believe in their politicians or government institutions, candidates who tap into voter disdain for the political system can find success. In my scholarly research on democratization, this is what I call the “politics of disillusionment.”

This phenomenon helped conservative outsiders to win in the United States, Italy and Hungary.

Now, disillusionment in Brazil has handed victory to a right-wing populist who promises to purge the country of his leftist opponents.

“Either they go overseas, or they go to jail,” he told a huge crowd in São Paulo in one of his last appearances before Sunday's vote.

INFLAMMATORY RHETORIC AND MILITARISM

Bolsonaro has been in Congress for three decades. But to harness popular rage against the system, his campaign offered an outsider's scathing critique of Brazilian society.

In response to rampant political corruption and extreme violence in Brazil, Bolsonaro defended military dictatorships like the one that ran Brazil from 1964 to 1985. The only problem with Brazil's former authoritarian leaders, Bolsonaro said, was that they “tortured rather than killed” dissenters.

Critics say his adulation of the military raises serious doubts about the future of Brazil's 33-year-old democracy.

Bolsonaro, a former army captain, regularly uses homophobic, misogynistic and racist rhetoric against large swaths of Brazil's population. He has said that he would “never allow” his children to get romantically involved with a black person and that he was “incapable of loving a homosexual son.”

Bolsonaro also once told a fellow congressional representative that she “did not deserve to be raped” by him because she was “terrible and ugly.”

THE PRESIDENT-ELECT'S AMBIGUOUS POLICY AGENDA

Beyond his inflammatory rhetoric, Bolsonaro has offered few specifics about how he would govern Brazil.

He skipped presidential debates and avoided tough questions about whether he would make economic and political reforms to help get Brazil out of its three-year-long crisis.

To tackle record-high crime, the president-elect has said he will ease gun laws and reduce the age of criminal responsibility from 18 to 16. He is a staunch proponent of restarting the death penalty in Brazil, saying he would “volunteer to kill those on death row” himself.

Brazil has the world's third-largest prison population. Sixty-four percent of those incarcerated are black.

Bolsonaro also wants to end affirmative action at Brazilian public universities.

He considers abortion to be murder. The procedure is banned in Brazil, but in recent years women's groups have been pushing to liberalize abortion laws. That is unlikely to happen under Bolsonaro.

Some analysts have suggested that Congress may rein in Bolsonaro's more radical tendencies. But evidence from the United States and elsewhere suggests that in the politics of disillusion, presidents who campaign as extremist govern as extremists.

Bolsonaro takes office on Jan. 1. Brazil's political institutions, already weakened by corruption and public outrage, will face great pressure to show that they can withstand the new president's populist ambitions and militaristic instincts.

It is a daunting challenge for Brazil's young and, I fear, faltering democracy.

Low intensity blast in Meghalaya's East Garo Hills

TURA (MEGHALAYA), OCT 30 (PTI): A low-intensity blast was triggered near the superintendent of police's office at Williamnagar in East Garo Hills district, police said Tuesday.

The blast took place around 10.35 pm on Monday, behind the compound of a cooperative building where some carpenters were sleeping, the police said.

"No one was hurt during the blast and we are trying to ascertain as to who was behind it. For now, no one has come forward to claim responsibility," the Superintendent of Police of East Garo Hills district, T G Momin, said.

"We are currently investigating the matter and trying to figure out the motive behind the act," he said.

Kolkata firecrackers fair shifted to new venue

KOLKATA, OCT 30 (PTI): The annual firecrackers fair will be shifted to a new venue this year, with the organisers failing to get a go-ahead from the Army to hold the event at its traditional site, the Kolkata Maidan.

The Army is the custodian of Maidan, a large open ground in the heart of the city.

The fair, exhibiting an array of firecrackers, is usually held prior to the Kali Puja and Diwali festivities.

It will begin from November 3 this year, instead of November 1, as the organisers - the Burabazar Fireworks Dealers' Association - claimed to have not received the consent letter from the Army till Monday evening.

"We have been given the nod by police and other agencies to hold the fair at Vivekananda Park in Southern Avenue," the association secretary Chittaranjan Maity said on Tuesday.

The Kali Puja and Diwali is slated on November 6 and 7, respectively.

"It will take more time to set up stalls and meet the safety regulations at the new place," another official of the association said.

An Army spokesperson said it had nothing to comment on the matter.

The firecrackers fair or 'Bazi Bazaar' started at Maidan in 1995 and was being held there since then.

Only 44 stalls had come up in the fair last year, down from the number of around 150 a couple of years back, Maity said, adding, each stall recorded a daily business of Rs 5-6 lakh in 2017.

Two other fireworks fairs at Tallah in north Kolkata and Behala in the city's southern fringe would be open from November 1.

Amid CBI controversy, govt starts framing guidelines to handle complaints against CVC

ASHWINI SHRIVASTAVA NEW DELHI, OCT 30 (PTI): The central government has started the process of framing guidelines to handle grievances or complaints against the Central Vigilance Commissioner (CVC), the Personnel Ministry has said.

There are no guidelines in place to handle complaints against the CVC, the ministry said in response to an RTI query.

The Personnel Ministry's assertion comes amid a raging controversy in the Central Bureau of Investigation involving its Director Alok Kumar and Special Director Rakesh Asthana.

The two warring officers, who have alleged each other of impropriety, have been sent on leave by the Centre.

On Friday, the Supreme Court asked the Central Vigilance Commission, that exercises superintendence over the CBI in corruption matters, to complete within two weeks its inquiry into allegations against Verma.

It is informed that as no guidelines to handle complaints against Central Vigilance Commissioner were in place, a process for framing guidelines to handle grievances/complaints against Central Vigilance Commissioner has been initiated, the ministry said.

It added that suitable action will be taken on complaints once such guidelines are in existence.

The ministry was responding to an RTI application filed by whistle-blower bureaucrat

Sanjiv Chaturvedi.

Chaturvedi had sought copies of correspondences from the Personnel Ministry related to a plea filed by him on July 15 last year with the president's secretariat.

The president's office forwarded it to the Personnel Ministry on July 27.

The plea was filed by Chaturvedi invoking Section 6 of the CVC Act that empowers the president to refer cases of allegation of misconduct against the CVC for enquiry by Supreme Court.

The secretariat had forwarded the application to the Personnel Ministry for necessary action.

Chaturvedi had alleged that the CVC closed cases of corruption involving senior functionaries in Delhi's All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS).

Chaturvedi, who has sought probe against Central Vigilance Commissioner KV Chowdary, had sent documents, running into almost 1,000 pages, in support of his claim to the office of the president.

He shared the details of seven cases with the president's secretariat. These include one on his alleged victimisation while he was chief vigilance officer (CVO) at AIIMS.

Chaturvedi served as the CVO, that acts as the distant arm of the CVC to check corruption, at AIIMS from July 2012 to August 2014.

He has brought various corruption cases to the notice of the CBI during his tenure. The CBI, after a detailed probe, recommended departmental action in four cases, naming officers and senior faculty members, which were closed by the CVC, reveal documents accessed by Chaturvedi through an RTI.

Chaturvedi then approached the president's office for taking necessary action against the CVC.

A parliamentary standing committee on health in its report submitted in August 2015 "strongly deprecated non serious attitude of health ministry in tackling corruption cases at AIIMS".

IIT KGP hosts Indo-German workshop on intelligent mobility

KOLKATA, OCT 30 (PTI): In an effort to give direction to the emerging intelligent transport mobility scene in India, IIT Kharapur and the Technical University of Munich (TUM) from Germany have organised a two-day workshop at IIT KGP.

The workshop which began Monday, is being held in the background of the newly-established Indo-German Collaborative Research Center on Intelligent Transportation Systems, and supported by the Indo-German Science and Technology Center (IGSTC) besides the German Federal Ministry of Education and Research (BMBF), an IIT KGP statement said Tuesday.

Various transportation experts from Indian and German academia and industry such as TUM, IIT KGP, TU Berlin, TU Chemnitz, IIT Bhubaneswar, IIT Patna, ISI Kolkata, TH Ingolstadt, Siemens, Bosch, Infineon, Intel, TCS, Ola Cabs, -- policy makers and law enforcement agencies are participating in the workshop.

The discussion on the emerging intelligent mobility landscape in India included interaction among the participants on intelligent solutions for transportation integration, technologies for electric vehicles and batteries and systems and software challenges in next generation vehicular technologies.

"Future transportation solutions in India must be developed with a holistic view of the wide milieu of options available in Indian cities and integrated end-to-end solutions will make public transport in India more reliable and comfortable and reduce the dependence on private vehicles. Prof. Samarjit Chakraborty of TU Munich was quoted as saying in the statement.

Two policemen, DD cameraman killed in Naxal attack in Chattisgarh

RAIPUR, OCT 29 (PTI): Two policemen and a cameraperson of Doordarshan were killed and two others were injured in a Maoist attack on Tuesday in poll-bound Chhattisgarh's Dantewada district.

The incident took place at around 11 am in a forest area near Nilawaya village, around 450 kms from here, Deputy Inspector General (anti-naxal operations) Sundarraaj P told PTI.

The Maoists ambushed a squad of local police which was carrying out patrolling on motor cycles from Sameli camp towards Nilawaya on Tuesday morning, he said.

A three-member team of Doordarshan was travelling for election-related news coverage at the same time and was caught in the cross-fire, he said.

In the attack, Sub Inspector Rudra Pratap Singh, Assistant Constable Mangalu and DD News Cameraman Achyutanand Sahu were killed, Sundarraaj said.

Sahu had come from New Delhi for the election coverage, he said.

Other two members of the DD team, including a journalist, were safe, the officer said.

Constable Vishnu Netaam and Assistant Constable Rakesh Kaushal sustained injuries in the gunfight, he added.

The injured have been admitted to Dantewada district hospital, he said, adding that if required, they would be airlifted to Raipur for further medication.

Union Information and Broadcasting Minister Rajyavardhan Singh Rathore condemned the attack and said the insurgents won't be able to weaken the government resolve.

"Strongly condemn the Naxal attack on @DDNewsLive crew in Dantewada. Deeply saddened by the demise of our cameraman Achyuta Nanda Sahu and two jawans of @crpfindia. These insurgents will NOT weaken our resolve. We WILL prevail," the minister tweeted.

Teams of Central Reserve Police Force (CRPF), Special Task Force (STF) and District Reserve Guard (DRG) were immediately rushed to the forest to trace the ultras, the DIG added.

On October 27, four CRPF personnel were killed and two others were injured when Maoists blew up their bullet proof bunker vehicle in Awapalli area of Bijapur district.

The next day, a BJP leader and member of Dantewada Zila Panchayat

Nandlal Mudiyaami was seriously injured after ultras attacked him with sharp edged weapons at his village Palnar in Dantwada.

The state is going to polls next month and naxalites have asked voters to boycott the exercise.

The first phase of polls covering 18 constituencies of eight naxal-affected districts Bastar, Kanker Sukma, Bijapur, Dantewada, Narayanpur, Kondagaon and Rajnandgaon will be held on November 12.

The remaining 72 constituencies will witness polling on November 20.

The counting of votes will take place on December 11.

Authorities ask people not to venture into Siang river after landslide in Tibet

ITANAGAR, OCT 30 (PTI): Authorities here asked people not to venture into the Siang river flowing through Upper Siang district following a landslide in Tibet which could trigger possible floods in the state.

The possibility of floods in the Siang river looms large if the artificial dam, formed by the landslide in the Yarlung Tsangpo river at 10 am Monday breached, according to officials here.

The Yarlung Tsangpo river is known as Siang in Arunachal Pradesh and Brahmaputra in Assam.

Upper Siang DC Duly Kamduk said in a circular

Tuesday that the Department of Disaster Management had informed the Upper Siang district administration about the landslide at the Milin section of the Yarlung Tsangpo river and the possibility of floods in the Siang.

The circular also stated that there has been an unprecedented decrease in the volume of water in the Siang river at Tuting since Monday night.

Advising people to take precautionary measures, the DC asked them not to panic or create panic.

Central Water Commission superintending Engineer of Guwahati-based circle office, Ravi Ranjan said, "The External Affairs Ministry on Monday night informed the Central Water Commission (CWC) about the landslide that occurred in the Yarlung Tsangpo River at the same place where another landslide had occurred a fortnight ago."

There was nothing to panic as only 1.44 meter of water volume had decreased since 10 pm Monday to 8 am Tuesday, Ranjan said.

According to the hydrological data of the CWC, the water level of the Siang River at Tuting is falling at the rate of one cm per hour.

Since it is winter season, the volume of discharge of water in the river would come down by 40 to 50 per cent, the DC said.

Golden langur habitat conservation project taken up in Assam

GUWAHATI, OCT 30 (PTI): A habitat conservation project has been taken up for the golden langurs - an endangered species - adjacent to Manas National Park in Assam, an organisation involved in the initiative said.

The 'Golden Langur Habitat Conservation' covers an area of around 23 sq km in a contiguous forest patch in the Manas National Park on the west and the Royal Manas NP of Bhutan on the north, the organisation said in a statement on Monday.

The golden langur is found only in western Assam and along the adjoining Indo-Bhutan border.

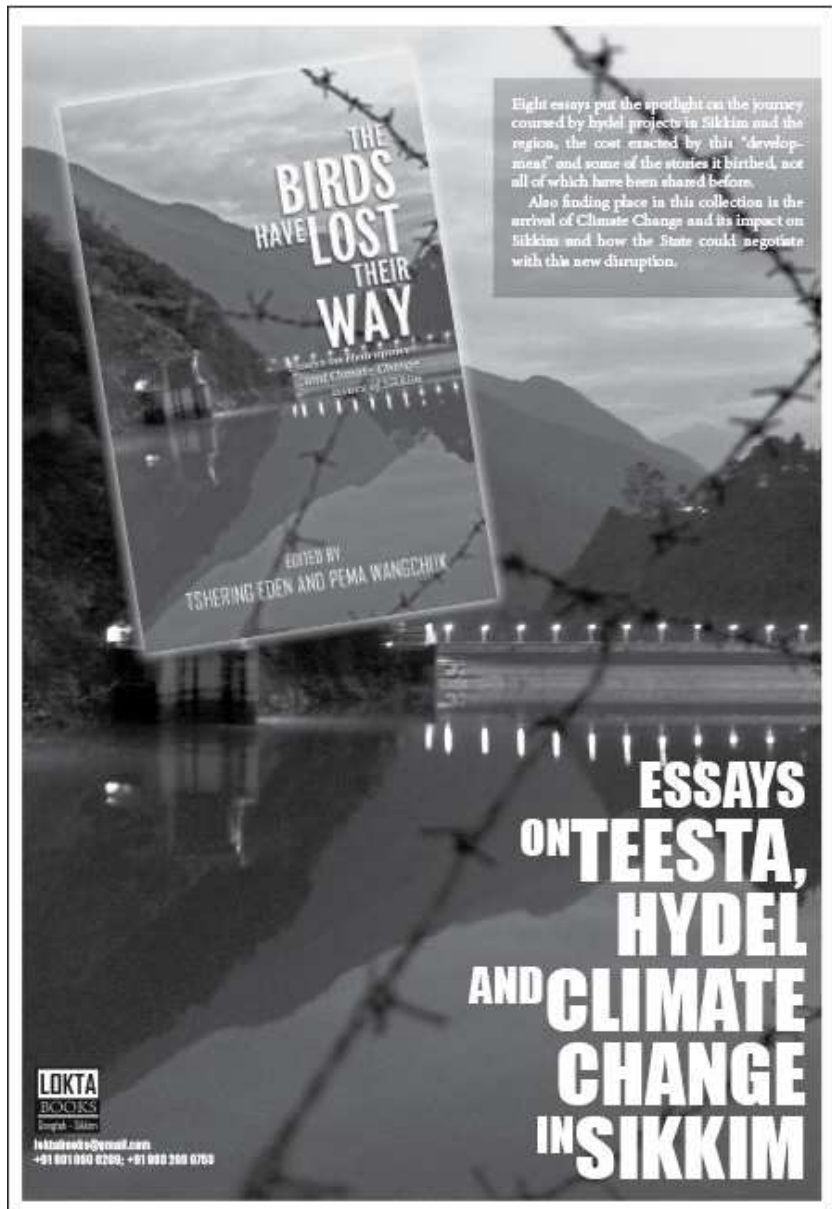

The project was taken up after 19 fringe villages in Assam gave their consent to it, the statement said.

The initiative was conceived by a community-based organisation, New Horizon, under the guidance of the Chirang Forest Division, Bodoland Territorial Council (BTC) and supported by the Wildlife Trust of India and its international partner, IFAW.

The monkey has light cream coats, which reflect golden hues in winter, and is the official mascot of the BTC administration.

The first boundary pillar and the welcome signage of the project was erected and the demarcation process of the area has begun, added the statement issued by the Wildlife Trust of India.

Icardi double lifts Inter Milan to second place in Serie A

MILAN, Oct 30 (AFP): Mauro Icardi scored in either half as Inter Milan beat Lazio 3-0 under the rain in Rome to move ahead of Napoli and into second place behind Juventus in Serie A.

Inter skipper Icardi tapped in the opener after 28 minutes with Marcelo Brozovic adding a second before the break on Monday.

The Argentine snatched the third after 70 minutes in the Stadio Olimpico, as Inter with 22 points from 10 games overtook Napoli on goal difference.

Carlo Ancelotti's Napoli were held 1-1 by Roma on Sunday.

Inter and Napoli are both six points behind Juventus who beat Empoli 2-1 on Saturday thanks to a Cristiano Ronaldo double.

"We're on the right track," said Icardi after his side's sixth straight league win.

It was also his sixth league goal this season.

"I'm going through a good period of form along with Inter. We're playing well, apart from the game with Barcelona (2-0 Champions League defeat), and want to do even better."

"We're not the anti-Juventus, as we're a few steps away to reach what they've done in recent years, but we are happy with what we are doing."

Luciano Spalletti's side controlled the game which had been in doubt all afternoon because of strong winds and rain in Rome.

With just one point separating the two sides the match was also an important step in the race for Champions League places next season.

Inter had snatched the final Champions League spot from Lazio on the last day of last season, condemning Simone Inzaghi's side to the Europa League.

Under sudden bursts of torrential rain, the game sprung to life with Icardi's opener after 28 minutes.

Perisic crossed for Matias Vecino, who flicked on to Icardi to finish off.

Shortly afterwards the rain began to bucket down with Lazio's Croatian midfielder Milan Badelj going off injured to be replaced by Danilo Cataldi.

The visitors seemed more at ease on the water logged pitch continuing to dictate play.

Lazio did not give up with Samir Handanovic pushing an Adam Marusic effort over the bar.

But they were only sporadic signs of a fight-back with Icardi drilling in the third with ease from a distance.

Lazio lack the conviction we have in other matches. These teams are built to win titles.

"I admit we deserved to lose this evening," said coach Inzaghi.

"Against the big teams Lazio lack the conviction we have in other matches. These teams are built to win titles.

"Now we want to get back on track against SPAL.

England cricketers warned over Sri Lanka upheaval

COLOMBO, Oct 30 (AFP): England's cricket stars have been told to stay away from political demonstrations while touring Sri Lanka, which is in the grip of a constitutional power struggle.

One man has been killed in upheaval after President Maithripala Sirisena sacked the country's prime minister and replaced him with former strongman leader Mahinda Rajapakse.

"We are exercising vigilance and avoiding all demonstrations or large political gatherings," England spokesman Danny Reuben told AFP.

"We are aware of a political demonstration today, but for us it is all about preparations for the first Test," Reuben said a four-day practice match in Colombo would go ahead as planned, despite the troubles in the capital.

England take on Sri Lanka in the first Test at Galle, in the south of the country, on November 6. England are due to stay in Sri Lanka until November 27 when the third Test ends.

The dispute between sacked prime minister Ranil Wickremesinghe and Rajapakse has already hit Sri Lanka's cricket establishment.

On Sunday, bodyguards for Petroleum Minister Arjuna Ranatunga, Sri Lanka's captain when they won the 1996 World Cup, opened fire at a crowd as they moved to rescue him from Rajapakse supporters.

One man was killed and two others were wounded. Ranatunga was arrested Monday on an allegation of ordering the shooting, but was released on bail.

Resurgent ATK eyeing maiden win against Bengaluru FC

KOLKATA, APR 12 (PTI): Hosts ATK will look to build on their winning momentum when they face last year's runners-up Bengaluru FC in an Indian Super League football fixture at the Saltlake Stadium here Wednesday.

Having suffered back-to-back defeats at home to start their campaign, the new-look ATK have managed to bounce back with two wins and draw. They will now seek to secure their maiden win against Bengaluru.

In their last match, ATK upset defending champions Chennaiyin FC 2-1 in a match which saw their attacking duo of Manuel Lanzarote and Kalu Uche in perfect co-ordination and according to coach Steve Coppell's plans.

While Uche struck the first goal, the ATK captain set up John Johnson for the second goal.

Their midfield also did a neat job with Brazilian Everton Santos showing creativity, along with with Pronay Halder.

Bengaluru FC will be up against a player who had been a key member of the side since the club's fairy-tale journey from 2013.

Having switched allegiance to ATK, English defender Johnson who earlier forged a solid partnership with Spain's Juanan at the heart of Bengaluru's defence, will now be seen thwarting the duo of Miku and Sunil Chhetri.

"The strategy is just to try and win every game. Bengaluru are a top side and they've proved it so far this season. They proved it last season. We look forward to it. We want to play the best teams and see how we cope. So, we are looking forward to that game now," ATK coach Steve Coppell said.

Speaking about the turnaround, the Englishman said: "Obviously, the first two games we lost and so it was a big win for us. The team is still evolving. You know, it's still taking shape.

"The more we play, the more players are put under the microscope. The more you see who responds well and who does not respond well, you can shape the team, even more, going forward. It's happening to me," he said.

It's been a tale of two strikers for Bengaluru

FC and Chhetri and Miku have been at their sublime best scoring five of the six goals in their unbeaten run from three matches this season.

In their last fixture against FC Pune City, the duo were heavily involved as Bengaluru struck three past their opponents to begin their three-match away sojourn.

Last season, Bengaluru were sensational in their away outings, winning seven out of their nine matches in the league stage -- the most by any team.

Having won their first away match of the season, Bengaluru FC have now five away wins on the trot.

The Blues will further be boosted by Dimas Delgado's return to full fitness as the Spaniard midfielder has the ability to pierce resolute defences.

Bengaluru FC also have conceded the least number of goals, only two this season, with Albert Serran and Juanan at the heart of their defence.

Both the teams have seven points each, but ATK have played five matches, compared to Bengaluru's three.

Uncapped Maqsood retained, Amir ignored in Pak squad for T20Is against NZ

KARACHI, Oct 30 (PTI): Senior left-arm pacer Mohammad Amir failed to make the cut but an uncapped Waqas Maqsood was retained in Pakistan's Twenty20 squad for the series against New Zealand starting Wednesday in the UAE.

Maqsood was earlier part of the Pakistan A side that played the New Zealand A in the UAE last month. This was followed by his selection in the senior outfit but he didn't get a chance to play against Australia.

Besides Maqsood there were no other surprises apart from left-arm pacer Amir again failing to win the selectors' confidence. He was ignored for the just-concluded series against Australia which Pakistan won.

The 26-year-old Amir has been out of form for the past few months after playing nearly non-stop since the end of his ban for spot-fixing in 2016.

The first match of the T20I series against New Zealand will be played on October 31 in Abu Dhabi.

The remaining two matches of the series will be played in Dubai on November 2 and 4 respectively.

India footballer now runs a tea stall

CHANDANA CHOWDHURY JALPAIGURI (WB), Oct 30 (PTI): A woman footballer, who represented the country 10 years ago, is now running a roadside tea stall in Jalpaiguri district.

Kalpna Roy, 26, also coaches around 30 boys and trains them twice a day in order to keep herself fit, as she still nurtures the dream of playing again.

Kalpna's stint as a footballer was cut short in 2013 after she suffered a serious injury in her right leg, during a match in the Women's League, which is conducted by the Indian Football Association.

"It took me about a year to recover. I got no financial help for the treatment from anyone. From then on, I am running the tea stall," Kalpna told PTI.

Her father used to run the tea stall but he is now suffering from old age ailments.

She said, "I was contacted for trial for the senior national side but financial constraints forced me to stay back. I do not have a place to stay in Kolkata. Besides, if I leave, who will look after the family? My father is not well now."

Kalpna is the youngest of five sisters, four of whom are married. One of them stays with her. Their mother died around four years ago.

The footballer, who used to play as a forward, did not marry as she has to look after her father and other members of the family.

Kalpna, who played four international matches as an under-19 footballer in 2008, now starts practising with the 30 odd boys in the morning and opens the tea stall around 10 am.

She closes the shop at 4 pm, goes for two hours' practice and reopens the shop after coming back.

"The clubs for which the boys play pay me Rs 3,000 per month. That money is also important to me," Kalpna said.

Kalpna said she is fit enough to play at the senior level and also experienced enough to coach.

"I am confident that I can contribute to the game in both ways. All I need is a job so that I do not have to worry for the family's requirements," she said.

IL&FS crisis: Normalcy to return to system in couple of weeks, says SBI Chief YOSHITA SINGH NEW YORK, Oct 30 (PTI): In wake of the IL&FS crisis, efforts are underway by the Indian government, RBI as well as SBI to try and stabilise the system very quickly, and things are likely to return to normal in a couple of weeks, SBI Chairman Rajnish Kumar said here.

Kumar said that the Infrastructure Leasing and Financial Services (IL&FS) was a unique institution operating in the infrastructure financing and construction space.

It is an engineering, procurement and construction (EPC) contractor, holding assets as well as its finances - it was a 3-in-1, Kumar said, adding that whether it is banks or non-banking financial companies (NBFCs), if they are in infrastructure financing, they have faced trouble in India.

Infrastructure, particularly the BOT (build operate transfer) model, has caused a lot of problem even to the banks.

We ourselves have suffered in the financing of infrastructure, Kumar said during an interactive session at the 9th New India Lecture' organised at the Indian Consulate under the aegis of Consul General Sandeep Chakravorty.

The lecture series is organised by the Consulate in partnership with the US-India Strategic Partnership Forum (USISPF).

Responding to a question on IL&FS and the impact of shadow banking on the Indian economy, Kumar said since it is an NBFC, it has had a contagion effect.

Because of the IL&FS default, there is pressure on mutual funds. The corporates who were providing liquid funds to mutual funds have become very cautious. In turn, the mutual funds have become cautious about their investments, he said.

Kumar added that in wake of the IL&FS crisis, the SBI stepped up in a big way.

This is how we are trying to stabilise the system and tackle the situation. RBI has announced measures around improving liquidity for NBFCs. The government, RBI and SBI - all of us are trying that the system stabilises very quickly.

I believe it is a matter of time - a couple of weeks when things return to normal, he said.

IL&FS and its subsidiaries have defaulted on several debt repayments recently due to liquidity crisis. It needs an immediate capital infusion of Rs 3,000 crore and is also planning a Rs 4,500-crore rights issue.

The company as of March 2018 owed over Rs 91,000 crore to banks and other creditors. On October 1, the government superseded the board of IL&FS and appointed a new board, with banker Uday Kotak as its executive chairman.

On the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code, introduced in 2016, Kumar said he considers it the most significant reform that the current government has carried out.

It's a new law, a new process. So obviously, there are some hiccups because there are issues around how the provisions of the code are interpreted," he said.

It is very hard for the existing promoters to believe that there is a law and a real threat of them losing control of the business. It's never happened in India in the past. That's where the fight is, but this was very badly needed, he said.

He said, going for-

There is only one Trump: White House

WASHINGTON, Oct 30 (PTI): There is only one Donald Trump, the White House has said, rejecting comparisons between the US president and the new right wing leader of Brazil, Jair Bolsonaro.

On Sunday, Bolsonaro was elected president of Brazil.

His brash style and harsh statements have led many to compare him to the US president, referring to him as “Trump of the tropics” or “Brazil’s Donald Trump.”

“There’s only one Donald Trump in my opinion,” White House Press Secretary Sarah Sanders told reporters when asked what she thinks about the comparison.

Sanders said the US values its longstanding relationship with Brazil.

“We want to continue to be able to work with them, and we’ll see what happens from there,” she said.

Trump unable to attend India’s Republic Day parade due to scheduling constraints: WH

WASHINGTON, Oct 30 (PTI): US President Donald Trump is unable to participate as Chief Guest of India’s Republic Day celebrations next year due to scheduling constraints, the White House has said.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi had invited President Trump for a bilateral visit to India during their talks in Washington last year.

White House Press Secretary Sarah Sanders had, in July, said that Trump has received an invitation to visit India, but no decision has been taken yet.

“President Trump was honoured by Prime Minister Modi’s invitation for him to be Chief Guest of India’s Republic Day on January 26, 2019 but is unable to participate due to scheduling constraints,” a White House spokesperson told PTI on Monday, when asked about Trump’s decision on Modi’s invitation.

It is said that the annual State of the Union (SOTU) address to both Houses of the US Congress by Trump is likely to be around the time India will celebrate its Republic Day. The SOTU is normally delivered in the last week of January or first week of February.

The spokesperson said that the US President and Modi enjoy a strong personal rapport and Trump is committed to deepening the India-US relationship.

“The President enjoys a strong personal rapport with Prime Minister Modi developed through two meetings and several phone calls and remains committed to deepening the US-India strategic partnership,” the spokesperson said.

“The President very much looks forward to meeting Prime Minister Modi again at the earliest opportunity,” the White House spokesperson said.

Modi and Trump are scheduled to attend the G-20 Summit in Argentina on November 30.

Sri Lanka braces for protest over PM’s sacking

COLOMBO, Oct 30 (PTI): Sri Lanka on Tuesday braced for a protest called by ousted prime minister Ranil Wickremesinghe’s party against what it said was a “coup” by President Maithripala Sirisena which has triggered a political crisis in the country.

Sri Lanka, a Buddhist-majority nation in the Indian Ocean, was plunged into chaos on Friday when President Sirisena sacked Prime Minister Wickremesinghe in a surprise move. He also suspended parliament in an apparent bid to shore up support for newly appointed Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa.

Sirisena is under increasing political and diplomatic pressure to reconvene parliament and resolve the constitutional crisis.

Wickremesinghe’s

United National Party (UNP) is set to hold a protest on Tuesday in the capital, Colombo.

“We are calling upon all sections of the society who believe in democracy and rule of law to gather and protest,” Champika Ranawaka, a former minister said.

Mangala Samaraweera, the ex-finance minister under Wickremesinghe said, “This was a constitutional coup and it is our duty to protect democracy and sovereignty of people”.

Speaker Karu Jayasur

iya urged the president to let Wickremesinghe prove his majority support on the parliament floor.

The supporters of Rajapaksa, a former president, are confident that he would be able to prove majority support on the parliament floor as they are sure that members of Wickremesinghe’s UNP would defect.

“We are waiting for more UNP members to join us. We have the numbers,” Lakshman Yapa Abeywardena, a Rajapaksa loyalist, said.

Wickremesinghe has said that he still commands the majority. However, he suffered a setback after four lawmakers from his party, who had pledged allegiance to him in the public, took a U-turn and accepted ministerial positions in the Rajapaksa government.

“We have the majority despite four of them joining Rajapaksa,” Ranjith Madduma Bandara, an ex-minister, said.

Speaker Jayasuriya has called for a meeting of all party leaders to assess the current political situation. At least 128 members had written to him calling for reconvening of parliament.

Jayasuriya has insisted that the issue needs to be settled within parliament.

The crisis turned deadly on Sunday when the bodyguard of a former cabinet minister fired on a crowd, killing at least one person and wounding two others.

Under Sri Lanka’s constitution, the president, who maintains executive powers, can appoint a new prime minister once the current premier has lost control of parliament.

Wickremesinghe argues he cannot legally be dismissed until he loses the support of parliament. His party, which holds a plurality of seats in the 225-member assembly, was prevented from holding a vote when Sirisena abruptly suspended parliament on Saturday until 16 November.

Wickremesinghe claimed in a Facebook post on Monday he had obtained the signatures of 126 MPs calling for parliament to be returned immediately to end the political standoff.

Both camps are working to secure their numbers in parliament.

Rajapaksa’s tenure as president was marred by allegations of authoritarianism, corruption and human rights abuses, especially against the country’s Tamil minority.

He was defeated at the 2015 presidential elections when Wickremesinghe and Sirisena formed an unlikely coalition, and their government initiated several investigations into alleged Rajapaksa-era crimes.

Bangladesh court doubles jail term for former PM Khaleda Zia

DHAKA, Oct 30 (PTI): Bangladesh’s ailing former prime minister Khaleda Zia suffered another setback on Tuesday when a court here doubled her jail term to 10 years in a corruption case, piling pressure on the Opposition ahead of general elections.

The verdict comes a day after Zia, the leader of the Opposition Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP), was sentenced to seven years in prison in another graft case.

A High Court bench comprising Justice Enayetur Rahim and Justice Mostafizur Rahman announced the verdict after accepting the Anti-Corruption Commission’s review petition to increase 73-year-old Zia’s imprisonment in the Zia Orphanage Trust corruption case from five to 10 years, The Daily Star reported.

A Dhaka court sentenced Zia to five years in jail in the orphanage corruption case on February 8. Zia has been imprisoned at the former central jail since then.

No lawyer for Zia and other accused of the case was present in the court room.

The bench did not say anything about other convicts of the case as they did not file any appeal and they are absconding.

Zia cannot contest the next parliamentary elections following the High Court verdict, Attorney General Mahbubey Alam told The Daily Star.

“This verdict means that Khaleda Zia will not be able to contest in the upcoming election,” the Anti-Corruption Commission’s lawyer Khurshid Alam Khan told reporters.

On Monday, she was sentenced for embezzling millions from the Zia Charitable Trust.

Zia faces dozens of separate charges related to violence and corruption that her lawyers insist are baseless. She had recently complained to the court that she was losing feeling in her hand and in a leg.

On October 6, she was taken to Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujib Medical University hospital, where she is currently receiving treatment.

Tuesday’s verdict is crucial as it came ahead of the parliamentary elections in December. Zia’s party had boycotted the 2014 elections.

The BNP has vowed nationwide marches later Tuesday to protest the verdict.

The latest court ruling deals a crushing blow to Zia, who was hoping of running against incumbent Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina in elections.

Zia was made vice-chairperson of the BNP in March 1983 after the assassination of her husband. She became chairperson of the party on May 10, 1984, a post she is holding till now.

In her 35 years of political career, Zia went to the jail several times.

During the 2007-2008 tenure of the army-backed caretaker government, she was in jail for about a year on charges of corruption.

More body parts found from crashed Indonesian jet

Jakarta, Oct 30 (AFP): Indonesian search teams Tuesday recovered more remains at the site of a crashed Lion Air jet that plunged into the sea with 189 people aboard, as a report said it had suffered an instrument malfunction the day before.

The Boeing-737 MAX, which went into service just months ago, crashed into the Java Sea moments after it had asked to return to Jakarta on Monday.

Flight JT 610 sped up as it suddenly lost altitude and then vanished from radar 13 minutes after take-off, with authorities saying witnesses saw the jet plunge into the water.

Dozens of divers are taking part in the recovery effort.

Search teams have filled ten body bags with limbs and other human remains, Muhammad Syaugi, head of the Indonesian national search and rescue agency told Metro TV, saying they will be taken to Jakarta for identification and DNA testing.

The remains of a baby were among those found, according to national deputy police chief Ari Dono Sukmanto.

Another 14 bags filled with debris have also been collected.

Shoes, items of clothing and a wallet are among the items found.

“We hope we can see the plane’s main body -- everything on the surface of the water has been collected,” Syaugi said.

Indonesia’s National Transportation Safety Committee (NTSC) said there were 178 adult passengers, one child, two infants, two pilots and six cabin crew on board flight JT 610.

Among them were the plane’s Indian captain, 20 Indonesian finance ministry employees and Andrea Manfredi, an Italian former professional cyclist.

The search and rescue agency all but ruled out finding any survivors late Monday, citing the discovery of body parts that suggested a high-impact crash in water some 30-40 metres deep off the coast of Indonesia’s Java island.

“We are prioritising finding the main wreckage of the plane using five war ships equipped with sonar to detect metal underwater,” said Yusuf Latif, spokesman of the Indonesian search and rescue agency.

Both the cockpit voice recorder and the flight data recorder -- which could be key pieces of evidence -- are still missing.

The plane had been en route to Pangkal Pinang city, a jumping off point for beach-and-sun seeking tourists on nearby Belitung island, when it dropped out of contact around 6:30 am (23:30 GMT).

Lion Air said the plane had only gone into service in August.

The pilot and co-pilot had more than 11,000 hours of flying time between them and had undergone recent medical checkups and drug testing, it added.

On Monday, Lion Air chief Edward Sirait acknowledged the plane had an unspecified technical issue fixed in Bali before it was flown back to Jakarta, calling it “normal procedure”.

A technical logbook detailed an “unreliable” airspeed reading instrument on the Bali-Jakarta flight on Sunday and different altitude readings on the captain and first officer’s instruments, according to the BBC.

Copies of several Lion Air technical documents have been circulating on social media, but they could not be immediately confirmed as authentic.

The company did not return phones calls seeking comment.

Boeing suspended release of the 737 MAX just days before its first commercial delivery last year due to an engine issue, according to airline safety and product review site airlineratings.com.

It said the engines were a product of a joint venture between US-based General Electric and France’s Safran Aircraft Engines.

Lion Air, Indonesia’s biggest budget airline which has been engaged in huge expansion, announced earlier this year it was buying 50 Boeing 737 MAX 10 jets for 6.24 billion.

Indonesia’s air travel industry is booming, with the number of domestic passengers growing significantly over the past decade, but it has acquired a reputation for poor regulation and its airlines had previously been banned from US and European airspace.

Lion has been involved in a number of incidents including a fatal 2004 crash and a collision between two Lion Air planes at Jakarta’s Soekarno-Hatta airport.
